ENGLAND HEEDS SCOTT'S DYING APPEAL

GRAFT BY POLICE IN WEST END

The AMERICAN today called to the attention of Police Commissioner O'Meara and of William P. Fowler, the new chairman of the Licensing Board, specific charges that officers acted in blackmail fisher J. Bowes, proprietor of the Hotel St. James in Bowdoin square.

Bowes refused to pay the "protection" money.

As a result, Bowes' friends declare persecution has begun and he is being slowly driven toward bankruptcy. He loses at once during the year covered by the alleged persecution of the police. Bowes' friends declare, has cost him $100,000, and the only end in sight is for him to close his doors.

Bowes' troubles began on the morning of January 16, 1912, when the Revere House burned. While the fire was in progress a policeman came up to Bowes and said:

Well, this fire will mean more business for you. Come across and everything will be all right.

Bowes refused to "come across" and says that then his troubles began. The St. James had been doing a cafe liquor business, selling to men and women. It was exactly like that of a score of other West End hotels and cafes.

It is a traffic against which the AMERICAN has castigated for years. The AMERICAN holds no brief for Mr. Bowes or his hotel, BUT—

Refused to "Come Across."

Mr. Bowes's place was it, K'd by the police until after the opening of the Revere House fire, when he refused to "come across."

Soon a complaint was sent to Commissioner O'Meara of liquor selling conditions at the St. James.

The complaint affected the cafe privileges of the St. James.

This complaint was followed by others, and when the liquor licenses were granted in May, 1912, Mr. Bowes was told that he would not be allowed to serve drinks to men and women who sat to the same room, that the men would have to be served alone.

Receipts Fell Off $6,000.

That very instant the receipts of the St. James decreased enormously. Shortly after the license was issued a man applied for a position at the hotel, saying that if he was hired "everything would be all right." The clerk looked the man was being forced on him and refused to hire him.

Mr. Bowes followed the requests of the licensing board to the letter. Every day the receipts decreased, and on the last day of December, 1912, he found that his receipts for that year, compared with those for 1911, were more than $60,000 less.

Several of his friends say that he has been practically ruined because he would not accede to the graft requests. And protest himself. He is the only hotel keeper also in the West End that does not serve drinks to both men and women in the same room.

Although the rules of the Excise Board require that no woman shall be allowed to enter a cafe, where liquor is sold, without an escort, there is one hotel in the vicinity where women come and go at will. At least three were seen by the AMERICAN reporter to enter the cafe alone and come from the place with men.

Bowes Silent on Case.

Because this alleged to have occurred at the St. James Hotel, the Bowes has refused only on condition that this should stop.

Mr. Bowes refuses to give information to the AMERICAN or to any one else regarding the graft charge. Mr. Bowes' friends declare that he has already suffered enough at the hands of the police without taking any more chances.

Mr. O'Meara, ask Mr. Bowes about the attempted police extortion by policemen!

Mr. Fowler, ask Mr. Bowes about the complaints and why the St. James Hotel was singled out of all the places in the West End and complained against!

When Commissioner O'Meara was given the information relating to the St. James Hotel he said:

"I cannot discuss that question."

"Mr. O'Meara, would you say there was or was not any graft among the patrolmen of the Boston Police Department?"

"Well," replied the commissioner, "it would be unreasonable to suppose that with a department of 1,800 men that every one of them was honest. I do not know of any such case and until somebody makes a charge of that nature, I will not know anything about it. If any such charge should be made to me I would immediately investigate it."

Diaz Cables the American: "All Chances in Our Favor"

FELIX DIAZ.

Mexico City, February 10

Editor, Boston American:

The revolt is in progress. In a few hours it will have to be decided. All the chances are in our favor.

I will protect all your citizens and property as I did when I was in control of the port of Vera Cruz.

GRADUATES TRYING TO PROVE HARVARD IS FOR POOR MAN

The Associated Harvard Clubs are trying now to make it plain that Harvard is not a rich man's college. Through the secretary, Josse E. Wald, formerly captain of the Harvard crew, they have sent out inquiries to all the members of the senior class regarding details as to the amount earned, the amount spent, and the general cost of living and of clubs at Harvard. With each set of questions a note was included.

"The Associated Harvard Clubs are compiling statistics by which they hope and expect to prove that Harvard is not a rich man's college. Will you assist them in this worthy cause by filling out the inclosed blank and returning it immediately to the secretary?"

WILSON WOULD BE LITTLE GIRL'S IDEAL

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—President-elect Wilson has expressed the hope that he will prove to be the sort of man that Anna Koford, a little twelve-year-old Queens borough girl, will always like to keep as a friend. Anna is in possession today of a letter of congratulation from the President-elect in answer to a note from her informing him that his birthday, December 28, is the same as hers.

POINDEXTER ORDER PASSES SENATE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—The Senate today passed the resolution offered by Senator Poindexter of Washington, which calls for all information as to the authority and reasons of the Secretary of the Treasury in ordering that customs receipts be deposited in national banks instead of the treasury.

DESLOUVRE TRIAL WITHIN A MONTH

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Feb. 11.—Governor Pothier explained today that he advised the postponement of the trial of Henri Deslouvre for the murder of Angele Parmentier, whose headless body was found in the Blackstone River, at the request of Attorney-General Herbert W. Rice, so that the government might finish its case. Attorney-General Rice said the trial would be held within a month.

MADERO ATTACKS REBELS

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 11.—8:30 a. m.—President Madero arrayed his loyal federal troops in battle formation at dawn to attack Colonel Diaz's insurgents.

Three thousand federal infantry and cavalry moved from the National palace court yard shortly afterward for the arsenal and barracks, both of which were held by rebels. The insurgent strength was equal to that of the loyal forces, each side having 3,000 men.

An effort has been made by the diplomatic representatives to secure foreign patrols for the district in which most of the foreigners live, since neither the Government nor the rebels can provide police protection, but the effort has failed. The American defence committee has instructed the American guard at the embassy to keep in close touch, and in case of danger Americans armed with rifles are expected to form unit.

At dawn the rebels began massing themselves before the National Palace, where Madero with 3,000 troops, supported by a battery of heavy artillery and another battery of machine guns, was fortified. Diaz sent a message under a white flag, calling upon Madero to surrender.

Madero Watches from Roof.

President Madero had personally taken command of his troops and had established himself upon the roof of the National Palace, where he could command the battlefield.

President Madero secretly returned to the national palace after he had placed his wife in the Japanese legation. Colonel Diaz has been making headquarters in the arsenal, where arms and ammunition have been dealt out liberally to all men who swore allegiance to the revolutionists.

An incident showing the ferocity of the American men in this city took place after the battle before the national palace Sunday. Two Americans, women in the crowd of spectators were shot dead and while their bodies lay in the streets, a band of Mexican ghouls, intent on looting the corpses approached. A number of American men defended the women's bodies with drawn revolvers, until they could be removed. The men did not know the women, never having seen them before.

Battleships for Vera Cruz.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—The United States has taken swift and stern action on the first outbreak of the Mexican revolution.

The orders from Rear-Admiral Charles Badger, in command of the Atlantic fleet maintenance, the first-class battleships Virginia and Georgia are steaming to Vera Cruz, where they are expected to arrive under forced draught Friday night or Saturday morning. They are carrying 200 extra marines.

POSTPONE ACTION ON 6-YEAR TERM BILL

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—The House Judiciary Committee today voted to postpone until the next session of Congress all action on the proposed amendment to the constitution providing a single term of six years for a President. This will prevent legislation of this kind at this session.

GARMENT STRIKERS PARADE

Several hundred striking garment workers not only took possession of Pemberton square today but invaded the courthouse itself, because a woman picket had been arrested, charged with attacking a non-union worker. When the accused woman had been admitted to bail, standing in the anteroom and facing the courthouse the assembled strikers gave her a noisy greeting, placed her at their head and paraded through the streets of the downtown district. They cheered for the strike and attracted the attention of thousands of people.

The arrest of a woman picket, an alleged attack upon an aged man and clashes between pickets and the police marked the progress of the garment workers' strike in Boston today. The disturbances broke out on Hawley street, near the entrance to the Macullar, Parker Company shop and attracted a big crowd. The police had been warned yesterday that a demonstration might be made today. An anonymous letter to the Macullar Parker Company, Company.

Just before the arrest of the Sophinski woman, Benjamin Weinberg, seventy-eight, of Blue Hill avenue, and said to be employed by the Macullar Parker Company, was badly beaten on Hawley street by several men who attacked him as he was on his way to work.

The anonymous postal card received by the Macullar Parker Company read as follows:

As a friend of people I wish to say that the union is planning to send about 1,000 men around your shop in order to keep your workers away from work hours.

CITIZEN.

Be prepared!

Examination of the card showed that it had been mailed at the Essex street postal station at noon yesterday.

DEATH OF VICE-PRESIDENT MITTON OF JORDAN COMPANY

Vice-President Edward J. Mitton of the Jordan Marsh Company died at his home at the corner of Beacon street and Summit avenue, Brookline, at 7:30 a. m. today. He had been ill ill health since last July.

Mr. Mitton was born in London, England, March 25, 1847. Coming to America with his parents, he was employed by Jordan Marsh & Co. in 1863 as a cash boy. He was fourteen years old and his salary was $2 a week. His unusual ability soon was recognized. He became a member of the firm on February 1, 1868. Mr. Mitton was recognized as an authority on fabrics both in this country and abroad.

He is survived by his wife, three sons, George W. Mitton, Arthur G. Mitton and Richard Mitton; two daughters, Mrs. George N. Gardiner, Jr., of New York, and Miss Edele Mitton. The funeral will take place Friday at 2 o'clock at his late residence.

32,718 FIREMEN OUT OF 33,916 VOTE TO GO ON STRIKE

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—Ninety-six and five-tenths per cent. of the firemen voting are in favor of a strike against the fifty-four Eastern railroads. This official result was announced in New York today at a joint conference of the railroad representatives and the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen. Out of 33,916 who voted, 32,718 voted for a strike.

Notwithstanding the crisis to which affairs seemed to have come today, it was believed likely that negotiations might continue for some time looking to a settlement, but it was also said that the railroad managers were despairing of a settlement, and that they were preparing for a strike.

MRS. DONNELL SEEKS FREEMAN'S PARDON

The fact that the women be admitted having robbed jewelry stores before Governor Foss was looked upon at the State House today as responsible for executive action, which brings the case of Richard L. Freeman, before the Pardon Committee of the Council tomorrow. Freeman is now serving a three-year sentence in the State Prison. He pleaded guilty December 11, 1911, to the charge of stealing bonds valued at $10,500 from Mrs. Susan M. Donnell. Today Mrs. Donnell told Governor Foss that she had forgiven him.

Scott Pens Touching Appeal to Aid Family

LONDON, Feb. 11.—In his last message to the world, Captain Robert F. Scott, the antarctic explorer, who was frozen to death with two of his men after two others, who had reached the South Pole with them had succumbed, declares that not faulty organization but misfortune caused the disaster to him and his comrades. He appeals to his country to take care of his bereaved wife and child.

MESSAGE TO THE PUBLIC

The causes of this disaster are not due to faulty organization, but to misfortune in all the risks which had to be undertaken.

One, the loss of the pony transport in March, 1911, obliged me to start later than I had intended and obliged the limits of the stuff transported to be narrowed.

The weather throughout the outward journey, and especially the long gale in 83 degrees south, stopped us. The soft snow in the lower reaches of the glacier again reduced the pace.

We fought these untoward events with a will, and conquered, but it ate into our provisions reserve.

Every detail of our food supplies, clothing, and depots made on the interior ice sheet and on that long stretch of 700 miles to the Pole and back worked out to perfection.

The advance party would have returned to the glacier in fine form and with a surplus of food but for the astonishing failure of the man whom we had least expected to fail. Seaman Edgar Evans was thought the strongest man of the party, and the Beardmore Glacier is not difficult in fine weather. But on our return we did not get a single completely fine day. This, with a sick companion, enormously increased our anxieties.

EVANS' DEATH SHAKES PARTY

I have said elsewhere that we got into frightfully rough ice, and Edgar Evans received a concussion of the brain. He died a natural death, but left us a shaken party, with the season unduly advanced.

But all the facts above enumerated were as nothing to the surprise which awaited us on the Barrier. I maintain that our arrangements for returning were quite adequate, and that no one in the world would have done better in the weather which we encountered at this time of the year. On the summit, in latitude 85 degrees to 86 degrees, we had minus twenty to minus thirty. On the Barrier in latitude 82 degrees, 10,000 feet lower, we had minus thirty in the day and minus

Premier Asquith Announces in Parliament that England Will Care for Families of Explorers—Memorial Services to Be Held in St. Paul's Cathedral, London.

LONDON, Feb. 11.—The British government has responded promptly to the dying appeal of Captain Robert F. Scott, that his family and the families of his four companions who died tragic deaths in their Antarctic Circle trip after placing the Union Jack on the South Pole should be provided for.

Premier Asquith announced in Parliament this afternoon that Captain Scott's appeal had not fallen on deaf ears, and that steps would be taken immediately to see that none suffers from want, as a result of the death of these brave explorers.

High tribute was paid to Captain Scott and his brave companions by the premier. Mr. Asquith showed great emotion at some of the touching passages in Captain Scott's dying message. He said:

"It is one of the most moving and pathetic utterances in the annals of discovery, showing, as it does, a brave, enduring man, face to face with death and yet thinking in the last moment only of his duty and not of himself."

A message was received from Lieutenant E. R. G. R. Evans, R. N., who is on the ship Terra Nova, reporting the deaths of his brother, Edgar Scott, who perished with Scott, and the others on the dash from the Pole.

Memorial Services.

Memorial services for Captain Robert Falcon Scott and his party of explorers who perished in the Antarctic ice fields, will be held in St. Paul's Cathedral, probably on Friday.

In his last penciled note written while death was stiffening his hand, Captain Scott hoped "that a nation so rich as his own would provide for the loved ones left by the victims of an ambition to carry the British flag farthest South."

Captain Scott, whose death with four of his heroic band has just been reported

Rosa Sarto, Sister of Pope Pius, Dies of Paralytic Stroke

ROME, Feb. 11.—Rosa Sarto, sister of Pope Pius X., died today, aged seventy-seven. Recently she suffered a stroke of paralysis.

Pope Pius could not leave the Vatican to see her, but sent a special representative to administer the last rites.

When Cardinal Sarto was chosen Pope, ten years ago, both his sisters moved to Rome to be as near as possible to their august brother, for whom they always entertained the deepest affection. They bore a striking facial resemblance to the Pope, as does also their other brother, who is a postoffice official in a country town near Rome.

Despite the exalted office in which their brother was called by the conclave which followed the death of Pope Leo XIII., neither the sisters of Pius nor his brother have departed in the least from the simple, religious lives in which they were always accustomed.

EXPLORER SCOTT MADE LIFE SACRIFICE FOR COMRADES

The last three to succumb, including Captain Scott, died within eleven miles from One Ton Depot, where they would have been safe.

They ate their horses and dogs when perished of cold and hunger.

Tale of Terrible Hardships.

Captain L. E. G. Oates of the finest Inniskilling Dragoons, the second man to die out of the five, hastened his own death, when he knew the end was inevitable, rather than hold his companions back from their own slender chance of surviving. He staggered out into a blizzard from the tent, though Captain Scott and the others tried to stop him. They never saw him again.

These facts arose out high in the still unsung story which is coming from New Zealand, relating the fate of the five explorers, after they had discovered the South Pole, their final, brave battle for life, their deaths and the subsequent finding of their remains by a searching party.

Documents found with the bodies relate a tale of terrible hardships, of men battling as long as the last spark of the last life remained, against deadly cold, hunger, disease and weakness. Everything but despair is written into this story left by perishing men.

No tale out of the arctic or antarctic exceeds the heroic spirit of these documents—destined to be Captain Scott's own epitaph of himself and his man.

Last of His Story.

That they knew they must surely perish is set down by the intrepid leader, who wrote that his documents and their corpses must tell to the long-waiting world the manner in which these men gave up their lives.

Before death overtook him Captain Scott penned a brief but eloquent appeal to England to care for the families of the perishing men.

It was at the very last of his story, after he had related the facts of the unequal struggle, that Captain Scott wrote of his confidence that his native land would take care of these families.

The commander had in mind his wife and the little boy, the child whom he had never seen.

As the exploration ship Terra Nova, which brought the news of the tragedy to civilization, crept today up the New Zealand coast toward Lyttleton, where she will dock, wireless messages from the survivors of the Scott party on board added details of the victory which were swallowed up soon afterward in death.

The ship which survived longest, only to die within eleven miles of the food and shelter of One-Ton Depot, included Captain Scott, Dr. Edward A. Wilson, who was chief of the scientific staff, and Lieutenant H. R. Bowers.

One Ton Camp is 155 miles north of the South Pole. Their bodies lay in their tent nearly eight months before they were found by a rescue party.

All the members of the party did not die of starvation. Edgar Evans and Captain L. E. G. Oates, who were the first to go, were victims of other agencies. Evans slipped upon the ice and succumbed to concussion of the brain, on February 17 last. One month later Captain Oates, weak from scurvy, frozen feet, frozen hands and fever, staggered from camp one night saying that he might not return for some time.

That was on March 17 last. He was never seen again and his body was not found.

Sympathy for Widow.

When the New Zealand cables, flashing their tragic story of the Scott disaster, come to that part where Captain Scott left his wife and child and the families of his men in England's care a wave of deepest sympathy went out toward the brave wife and mother who is now sailing across the Pacific, still in ignorance of her husband's fate.

Mrs. Scott left England January 4 for New Zealand. She sailed from San Francisco on the western coast of the United States, on February 5. Unless the vessel on which she is a passenger is informed en route, Mrs. Scott will not know of her husband's death until she arrives in New Zealand.

Already a movement is on foot to have the British Government vote a pension for Mrs. Scott and provision will be made for any dependants of the other four men who perished with the explorer.

The exact date of the death of Captain Scott, Dr. Wilson and Lieutenant Bowers is not known, but it is presumed that it occurred late in March of 1912.

Surgeon E. L. Atkinson of the Royal Navy headed the relief party which found the dead bodies, and it was he who pronounced the funeral service over the remains in the ice stretches where the tragedy was revealed. The bodies of the three men were found huddled close together. The natural cold had acted as a preserver. Even the face of each was calm and peaceful.

Find Amundsen's Record.

From the documents left by Captain Scott and the few added details given by the searching party there is pieced together a story that shall live in the history of the world's records of heroism.

On January 18, 1912, five men stood at the South Pole. They were Captain Robert Falcon Scott and four of his South Polar band. The other four were Dr. Edward A. Wilson, chief of the scientific staff; Lieutenant H. R. Bowers, Petty Officer Edgar Evans and Captain L. E. G. Oates of the Inniskilling Dragoons. All were picked men, the flower of a perilous venture.

Evans, the petty officer and seaman, as Captain Scott styled him, was regarded as the most vigorous of the quintette. By ironic fate, it was Evans who was destined to perish first from accident.

At the South Pole Captain Scott had found the records and tent left by Captain Roald Amundsen, the Norwegian explorer, who had been at the goal a month previous. Amundsen's party was at the South Pole from December 14 to 17, 1911.

What mingled feelings of disappointment at being forestalled to the South Pole and of admiration of his rival's feat stirred Captain Scott's breast is not disclosed yet and never may be.

Fatal Return Trip.

But, having achieved the Pole and made their records, Captain Scott and his four men started back on their terrible journey toward their base of supplies.

It was nearly ten weeks before the last of the five men perished. The documents show that the spark of life was burning in at least one of the party up to the latter part of March, 1912.

They were at the Pole on January 12. The last three perished about March 29, as near as can be figured.

After they had been on a homeward journey a month Captain Scott wrote into his documentary account that he believed his party had ever suffered such a month of experiences in polar exploring and had survived. That, of course, was before the gallant commander of the expedition realized that they could not last.

He still believed they would win out. He thought that his long-arranged plans, his experienced forethought, had made failure impossible.

But there were circumstances against which even Captain Scott's skill and endurance could not provide.

One was an accident to Petty Officer Evans, who fell while the five men were stumbling across unusually roughened ice when the party had been traveling a month on the way back.

Evans' accident was a terrible blow. It cost Evans his life and undoubtedly cost much to do with the ultimate loss of the party.

Captain Scott placed much confidence in Evans' physique and endurance. His accident not only crippled one of the most vigorous men of the five, but threw an added burden on his four companions.

Buried Evans' Body.

Evans died of concussion of the brain. Captain Scott takes care to mention in his documents that he did not perish of exposure or scurvy, but naturally.

His death left the party weakened. But, after disposing of Evans' body in the snow and ice, they pushed along to the great ice barrier, confident of success for the remaining four.

But the rest of the journey was worse and worse. Captain Scott felt that the world would ask why his expedition perished, why it was allowed to be overcome, what fault, if any, there was in the arrangements.

So the captain, his scientific and exploring pride aroused, took pains in his documents to explain that every conceivable detail had been thoroughly worked out beforehand, that food, supplies, clothing and so on had all been thought out and provided.

But disaster did come, one after another. Some were accidental, like the injury to Petty Officer Evans.

Others were natural, due to the climate. The ice was rougher on the glacier than even Captain Scott expected, judging by the way he characterized it.

They did not get one thoroughly fair day on the way back, that is, what Arctic and Antarctic explorers call good weather.

On the summit of the glacier they found temperatures ranging down to 20 to 30 degrees below zero. But, on the barrier they were faced with still lower temperatures, down to as low as 47 below zero at night. In addition to this, a cruel head wind blew in their faces practically all through the fearful day marches, when the men staggered along, urged by sheer indomitable will.

Tale was unusually severe weather for the barrier trip and its effect on the party was disastrous.

Even then they expected to pull through. But death overtook the Little band a second time. This time it was Captain Oates. He fell victim of exposure. The brave officer, a picked man like the others, was literally frozen by inches until he could stand it no more.

Found Death in Blizzard.

Toward the middle of March his condition became pitiful. He had borne his suffering for days and without a word of bitterness. But he knew he never could live to see home again. His hands and his feet were so bitten by frost that he could hardly use them. His suffered intense agonies.

Finally the brave soul could battle no more. It was March 16 of last year. Captain Oates went to sleep wishing he might never waken.

But in the morning Captain Oates was still living. He awakened. He made up his mind then to die. He had urged and urged his three companions to go on and leave him. They refused, like the heroes they were, to abandon him while life remained. But he knew that every day they stayed by him meant less and less chance of any one surviving.

Captain Oates rose to his feet and saw that, outside the camp, a blizzard was raging. He said to his companions:

"I am just going outside and may be some time."

He knew, and they knew, that he would never return, that for him to venture into that blizzard was quick death.

The record of the party says at this point:

"He went out into the blizzard and we have not seen him since."

To this was added the explorer's epitaph:

"We know that Oates was walking to his death, but, though we tried to dissuade him, we knew it was the bravest act of an English gentleman."

So perished the second man of the five, a man who went to his death bravely in a last hope that, by deliberately hastening his own inevitable end, he might aid possible survivors.

There were left Captain Scott, Dr. Wilson and Lieutenant Bowers. They and already suffered another misfortune in an unexplained shortage of fuel in the depots which had been established for the homeward trip.

Shortage of Supplies.

Captain Scott wrote:

"We should have got through in spite of the weather, but for the sickening of a second companion, Captain Oates, and a shortage of fuel in our depots, for which I cannot account."

What caused this shortage is yet to be told. The world knows how carefully polar explorers establish successive bases of supplies, in which are food and fuel. These are the safety points of their trip.

At some point or points along the way back in that fearful ten weeks Captain Scott and his men came upon their supply depots and found a shortage.

In the words, "For which I cannot account," show the terrible shock it must have been to Captain Scott and his band to find less supplies on hand than expected. It was hard enough, on the way back, to locate the supply depots. It was failure to find the last station, One Ton Depot, which led to their deaths within eleven miles of succor. But to find the depots along the way and then discover a shortage of fuel, could only be bitterest disappointment.

Four days after Captain Oates walked out to his death, the three remaining men went into camp. The had food for two days and fuel enough to cook one hot meal. The shortage of fuel in depots they had come to on the march was beginning to have sinister effect.

They were only eleven miles from One-Ton Depot. This should be well stocked and, as subsequent events showed, it was supplied.

But the three men were never destined to get the food and fuel only eleven miles away. They knew they were within that distance of One Ton Depot, for Captain Scott so wrote it in the final passages of his diary.

Scott's Last Message Tells Disaster's Cause

It is clear that these circumstances came on very suddenly, and our wreck is certainly due to this sudden advent of severe weather, which does not seem to have had any satisfactory cause.

I do not think human beings ever came through such a month as we have come through, and we should have got through in spite of the weather but for the sickening of a second companion, Captain Oates, and a shortage of fuel in our depots, for which I cannot account, and, finally, but for the storm which has fallen on us within eleven miles of this depot, at which we hoped to secure the final supplies.

Surely misfortune could scarcely have exceeded this last blow!

HAD BUT TWO DAYS' FOOD.

We arrived within eleven miles of our old One Ton camp with fuel for one hot meal and food for two days. For four days we have been unable to leave the tent, the gale blowing about us. We are weak.

Writing is difficult, but for my own sake I do not regret this journey, which has shown that Englishmen can endure hardships, help one another, and meet death with as great a fortitude as ever in the past. We took risks. We knew we took them. Things have come out against us, and therefore we have no cause for complaint, but bow to the will of Providence, determined still to do our best to the last.

But if we have been willing to give our lives to this enterprise, which is for the honor of our country, I appeal to our countrymen to see that those who depend on us are properly cared for. Had we lived I should have had a tale to tell of the hardihood, endurance and courage of my companions which would have stirred the heart of every Englishman.

These rough notes and our dead bodies must tell the tale, but surely, a great rich country like ours will see that those who are dependent on us are properly provided for.

BOSTON AMERICAN

$40,000 CONTEST

GOOD FOR 5 .. VOTES ..

VALUELESS AFTER TUESDAY.

Name .....

Street and No. .....

City or Town ..... Dist. .....

Send votes in one bundle. Keep 5-vote coupons separate; one 25-vote coupon. Write name or stamp on outside wrapper candidate's name, address and district number, and total number of votes said to be contained in package. Write or stamp only 3 of 4 coupons in each bundle if possible, candidates should use rubber stamp with name, address and district number.

NOW FOR THE FINAL DASH TO $40,000 GOAL

BY THE CONTEST EDITOR.

No more vote lists until the finish. The candidates, and the final winners are announced.

Through an error in printing, the vote total of Leader Sommerville in last Sunday's list was incorrectly published in the District One list, although it appeared correctly in the list of eight leaders for the capital prize.

Two weeks from next Friday will tell the last chapter of the $40,000 prize story. "Who's who" will be determined largely by the subscription results produced during this final whirlwind finish.

This great contest in many ways resembles a Marathon race, the greatest effort and the hardest grind coming at the finish. The ones who have the stamina, the courage and the everlasting hustling ability will undoubtedly be the ones who will capture the big awards.

The account of stock tonight. How many people do you know in any of the New England States to whom you have not yet made application for subscriptions to help your campaign?

If you have missed even one you have not done your full duty to yourself.

There is still time to get a final clean-up canvass of your territory.

Delays are dangerous. Look out for your campaign fences and hustle for all you are worth on this—the final dash to the $40,000 goal.

MOTHER EULALIA STRICKEN IN CONVENT

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 11.—Mother Mary Eulalia, who previous to taking the veil was Miss Willcox of this city, widely known in the old conservative society here, died following a fainting spell while attending the funeral of Mother Gertrude. She died in the Jewish Hospital, where she was taken in the automobile of her sister, Mrs. Robert Y. Lesley of Ledelia court, Haverford, Pa.

OME MADE RECIPES FOR BEAUTY HELPS

A SUPERIOR SHAMPOO—Get an original package of castilene and dissolve just 1 teaspoonful in a cup hot water. This is enough for the heaviest growth of hair and is wonderfully soothing to tender, irritated scalps. The lather it creates gently and entirely removes every atom of dust, dandruff and excess oil, and after rinsing the scalp is soft, clean and plant and the hair will be fluffy and greatly exercise in color. Castilene shampoos also make the hair roots and scalp tissues and encourage a lovely growth of long, lustrous hair.

TRY THIS FOR HAIRY GROWTHS—Mix together some dekatone and water and apply this paste to the hairs not wanted. In two or three minutes rub off, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. Rarely is it necessary to use more than one application to remove even stubborn growth.

BLOOD PURIFIER—Sallow skin, pimples, loss of energy and appetite and a general condition of chronic ill-health are due to impure blood. Purify the blood with this reliable, lemon-acids tonic: Dissolve one-half cupful sugar and one ounce sanlene in one-half pint alcohol (not whisky), then add hot water to make a quart. Take a tablespoonful before each meal. The wonderful strength-building and cleansing properties of this old-fash-ioned tonic make it invaluable for building up a run-down system.

POLICE GUARD CHILDREN AND DEAD MOTHER

Three policemen, watching over the body of Mrs. Mary A. McDonald, at No. 12 Elsworth street, Dorchester, have cared for her three orphan children since she was found dead last evening.

The non-appearance of the medical examiner has meant that all through the night and today, Patrolmen Gale, Walsh and Hallgan, have relieved each other, not only in the death watch, but in the housework and care of the children.

Six years ago Thomas McDonald, father of the family, died, and since that time Mrs. McDonald has been the sole support of her family. The children are Elizabeth, aged fourteen; Margaret, seven, and Joseph, six.

Last night, Elizabeth, the oldest, tried to awaken her mother, who had been sleeping in her own room. But Mrs. McDonald did not respond to her appeals and the child realized that the tragedy had occurred. Frightened, she ran for aid to neighbors, who summoned Dr. Robert Merrick. The physician found Mrs. McDonald was dead, and the police and the medical examiner were summoned.

The medical examiner did not arrive, however, and as is customary, a policeman, Patrolman John J. Gale, was sent to remain with the body.

Gale found the three children alone, the two younger protected and comforted by Elizabeth, who alone realized the depth of the tragedy. And early this morning, owing to the good offices of the patrolmen, there was a cheery fire in the kitchen stove, and a substantial breakfast, supplied and cooked by the generous bluecoats, helped to make the grief of the children less poignant.

GOOD VOTE CAST IN ELECTION FOR MURRAY'S PLACE

A fairly heavy vote was cast during the first hours of polling today, at the special election in the Third Suffolk Representative District, which comprises Ward 3 of Charlestown.

The candidates for the position, which was made vacant by the death of Representative William J. Murray, shortly after his election last November, are Former Senator Peter F. Tague, Democrat; James L. Hourihan, Republican, and Daniel T. Callahan, Progressive.

As the ward is strongly Democratic, it was conceded that a victory for Tague was assured.

WOMEN OBJECT TO "INFERNO" FILMS

Despite the fact that the Melrose Women's Club at its last meeting refused to accept an invitation to view a production of Dante's "Inferno" in moving pictures, the management of the Globe theatre, Melrose, has gone ahead with the arrangements originally planned and will present the pictures. The delay of the club in taking action on the matter led the management of the theatre to believe that the members approved of the production.

TAILORS TO MAKE MEN THE FAIR SEX

CLEVELAND, O., Feb. 11.—According to tailors gathered here for the annual convention of the National Merchant Tailors' Association, it is all bosh about women being the fair sex. Its only in hair and clothes that women have the advantage. The tailors are going to remedy the clothes part of it. New styles for men are to be clingy, without stiffening about the collar and carefully fitted, as are women's clothes, over the shoulders and chest.

Simple Prescription Wonderful Kidney and Bladder Cure

The following simple prescription has become famous on account of its remarkable cures in cases of kidney and bladder ailments: Get six ounces of good pure gin and add to it one-half ounce Murax Compound and one-half ounce fluid extract Buchu. Take one to two teaspoonfuls of this mixture after each meal and at bed time. It quickly relieves backache, rheumatic pains in the joints, and other well known symptoms which can hardly be mentioned here. The ingredients can be had at any good drug store and are easily mixed. Be sure to use good pure gin. Also make sure to use the genuine Murax Compound, which comes in a sealed wooden tube, as a substitute will not give the desired results.

The real serious forms of kidney disease can be avoided if the above treatment is taken in time.—Advertisement.

WHAT MAYOR FITZGERALD DID ON HIS BIRTHDAY.

1 a. m.—Arrived home from social function.

1:15 a. m.—Looked over the figures of the budget, which must be cut $1,000,000 before his departure for Palm Beach.

2:45 a. m.—Relinquished consideration of the budget and retired.

6:40 a. m.—Awakened by his six-year-old son Fred, who tickled his ear and shouted "Happy birthday, papa."

7 a. m.—Enjoys cold water plunge.

7:15 a. m.—Breakfasts with members of his family and spends some time looking over list of presents he received, including $1,200 china set from City Hall friends.

8:20 a. m.—Starts for Roxbury and looks over proposed site of new garbage station.

9 a. m.—Arrives at Park Department office in Jamaica Plain.

10 a. m.—Reaches City Hall.

10:15 a. m.—Holds impromptu reception and admires floral pieces and gifts his desk discloses.

Today was the fiftieth birthday of the best known citizen of Boston, John Francis Fitzgerald.

Everyone was smiling at City Hall.

There were flowers and gifts in evidence, both at City Hall and out at the Mayor's home on Welles avenue, Dorchester, to show everyone that His Honor has many friends. Even his old friend, Sir Thomas Lipton, had to send him over a line or two by cable to show that he hadn't forgotten the fact that it was the day of days with Boston's Mayor.

This is the cablegram that Mayor Fitzgerald received from Sir Thomas:

If you had only added to your many other splendid achievements the faculty of being in two different countries at the same time, you would then be able to realize how very credibly your friends in Britain join with Bostonians in wishing you many happy returns of the day.

As it is, you must accept this sincere greeting by cable and profound regret you are not here to sing "Sweet Adeline."

Irishmen on this side are proud of Boston's Irish Mayor. May you and your famous city live long and prosper, and may it never again become necessary to waste good tea by throwing it into cold water.

(Signed) SIR THOMAS LIPTON.

When the Mayor reached City Hall, he found not floral tributes on his desk, but a gold watch, the gift of his secretaries, Colonel Dick Field and Eddie Moore, with a gold chain, the gift of the other men in the office, and a gold penknife as well, the gift of the young women employed there.

There were many callers on hand to pay their respects. At 1 o'clock the Mayor was the guest of his City Hall friends at a luncheon at Youngs and at 6 this evening he completes the social portion of the day, so far as his birthday is concerned, by taking dinner with the members of his own family, at home.

All doubt as to the out and out fact that this was the really, truly, cross-your-heart birthday for the Mayor and that he was not forty-eight, as some have intimated, but fifty, were removed today when a copy of the record on file at the registry of births was obtained.

Is Really Fifty Today.

This document, sworn to by City Registrar Edward W. Mellon, shows that upon February 11, 1863, John Francis Fitzgerald, son of Thomas and Rose Fitzgerald, was born at No. 20 Perry street, North End. The birthplace of both the father and the mother of the boy destined to become the Mayor of Boston were given as Ireland.

When Mayor Fitzgerald was Congressman Fitzgerald someone blundered a bit in setting forth his date of birth in the Congressional Directory, placing it as February 11, 1865, an error in fact, since the birth certificate and attestation shows conclusively that it should have been February 11, 1863.

CAPTURE 3 BOSTON WIFE DESERTERS

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 11.—Three wife deserters started back to Boston today with Detective Richard Flynn of Chicago. The trio includes W. A. Wheeler, Edward G. Arnold and Gage Miller. All of them decided today that they were willing to join their families.

CLERGYMAN STOPS CHURCH WHISPERING

The topic of discussion in Wollaston today was the statement of Rev. J. Stanley Durkee of Campello at the Wollaston Congregational Church last night, when he threatened to name people in the congregation who were talking and whispering while he was speaking.

There is no substitute for Royal Baking Powder for making the best cake, biscuit and pastry. Royal is Absolutely Pure and the only baking powder made from Royal grape cream of tartar.

U. S. WARSHIPS ARE RUSHED TO MEXICAN PORTS

SOFIA, Feb. 11.—Heavy losses were inflicted upon the Turks by Bulgarians during a sortie from the Tchataldja forts, twenty-five miles north of Constantinople, yesterday, according to a war office dispatch received today.

It was semi-officially announced that the Turks lost between 5,000 and 6,000 men and fifty officers at the battle of Bulair, on the Gallipoli peninsula.

VIENNA, Feb. 11.—Both Bulgarian and Turkish armies facing each other at Bulair on the Gallipoli peninsula were reinforced today, and another battle is imminent.

GRAND JURY CALLS BANK DIRECTORS IN THE KELIHER CASE

Walter E. Hale, now with the Harvard Trust Company of Cambridge, and David A. Barbour, of the same institution, both of them former directors of the defunct National City Bank of Cambridge, which was looted by George W. Coleman, a $12 a week clerk, and the Keliher gang, were called before the Suffolk County Grand Jury today in the investigation of the alleged confessions of "Big Bill" in the famous case.

John M. Graham, President of the International Trust Company of No. 45 Milk street, was also called, and it is stated that Attorneys Daniel G. Reed and Charles H. Innes, who at one time represented Keliher, will appear. The Grand Jury is also trying to get word to Walter Holden, a former lobbyist, who is now in Alaska, that his presence is wanted, another man called is Max Ratchesky, of the prominent family of bankers of the United States Trust Company.

It was learned today that owing to startling revelations which have been made and are promised that it will be at least three days before the investigations of the Grand Jury will be completed, and that even then they may arrange to hear the testimony of Holden later if he can be reached.

Grand Jury Hears Attorneys.

The Grand Jury also listened to evidence given by attorneys, Harvey H. Brigham, Roland H. Sherman and William Shea. They also examined Daniel F. Shea of the Boston Post, to whom it was alleged Keliher gave some of his confession in writing. This is the confession now being investigated by the Grand Jury.

The sworn story of McHugh, brother of Mrs. Keliher, wife of "Big Bill," printed today for the first time, McHugh gave the testimony under oath before Samuel K. Hamilton, master in the suit brought by former Governor John L. Bates, receiver of the National City Bank of Cambridge.

McHugh tells how he gave Mrs. Keliher $3,000 as his contribution towards bail for Keliher. McHugh's story throws light on the mystery of the "nix box," in which "Big Bill" claims his wife had kept $12,000 left her by his brother, Thomas Keliher.

McHugh tells how "Big Bill," his brother-in-law, would leave packages" at his home in the McHugh safe. McHugh says he held money for Keliher "lots of times."

"At one time during the baseball betting season," says McHugh, "I held about $4,000 or $5,000 for Keliher."

Jury Calls Prominent Men.

Men prominent in political, financial and legal circles are understood to have been called to appear today before the special session of the Suffolk County Grand Jury. It is declared every person named by "Big Bill" Keliher in his so-called confession will be called upon to state under oath whether the facts stated in the confession are true.

Two governors, a mayor and a judge, all now dead, besides men prominent in State Street, are among those Keliher named in his statements of the work of Martin Walsh's gang of fake swindlers.

The scope of the inquiry is asserted to have extended far beyond the purpose of determining if Keliher ever saw a transcript of George W. Coleman's testimony, and, if so, from whom he obtained it.

Keliher is declared to have received $150 for his so-called confession, in which he names a score or more men now or once prominent in Boston. The statement was made part orally and part in writing at the Charlestown State Prison to representatives of a Boston paper.

Keliher said he took various prominent men to New York, where he and Martin Walsh fleeced them in the faro bank swindle. Some of the men whose names were mentioned, but which were omitted in the published confession will be questioned by the District Attorney to see if there was any truth in Keliher's declarations regarding their actions.

Part of McHugh's testimony follows:

McHugh's Testimony.

Q.—In what form did you give her that money? A.—I gave her $100 bills and $50 bills.

Q.—Did you draw it out of the bank? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Where did you get it? A.—I had it.

Q.—You had $2,000? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—In a tin box in a bureau drawer? A.—No, in a safe.

Q.—At your office? A.—In my store.

Q.—Do you keep any bank account? A.—No.

Q.—Didn't keep any at that time? A.—Never kept a bank account, always paid in cash.

Q.—That represented accumulations of business? A.—Business.

Q.—I mean of business earnings? A.—Business earnings.

Q.—Do you mean to say, Mr. McHugh, when you have a bill of a wholesaler or anybody you always paid in bills? A.—Pay it in bills.

Q.—You never draw checks? A.—Never drew checks.

Q.—Never had an account in your own name? A.—Never had an account in my own name.

Q.—Who is in business with you. A.—Nobody.

Q.—Did William J. Keliher ever have any interest in that business? A.—No, not him.

Q.—Do you remember a certain occasion when Mr. William J. Keliher was called out he walked into your store and opened the cash register and took the cash out and pocketed it? A.—Mr. Keliher?

Denies Keliher Was Partner.

Q.—Yes, William J. A.—No, sir, Mr. Keliher never was behind a bar in my place.

Q.—Didn't Mr. William J. Keliher have an interest in that business? A.—He never had any interest in my business at all.

Q.—Wasn't he permitted to take money out of that cash register when he wanted? A.—No, sir.

Q.—When you got your sister this $3,000? A.—Over in the Union Institution for Savings, in the hallway of the building going upstairs, No. 218 Tremont street.

Q.—You hadn't gotten any part of it out of the Union Institution for Savings? A.—No, I always have a little deposit in the Union Institution for Savings. I put away $25 a week for my family, but I didn't touch that money.

Q.—What time was it? A.—In the evening, about 6 o'clock.

Q.—Did she give you a receipt for it? A.—No.

Q.—Had you seen her husband in connection with it? A.—No, I wasn't on friendly terms with her husband.

Q.—Why not? A.—Because I never cared about his line of business.

Q.—How much money did you have in the safe, Mr. McHugh, when you took the $3,000 out? A.—About $3,000.

Q.—And that represented accumulations of how long a time? A.—Oh, maybe a year or so, from time to time and again.

Q.—Do you own any real estate? A.—I have not a foot of it.

Q.—Have you money invested in stocks or bonds or mortgages? A.—No, no stocks at all.

Had Savings Account.

Q.—How long had you had this savings bank account in the Union Institution for Savings? A.—I had a savings bank account with the Union Institution for Savings, it sometimes ran from June to the middle March. I think I had had it there for two years.

Q.—Did you have any other savings bank accounts? A.—No.

Q.—How long had you been for yourself in this business without any partner? A.—I have been by myself in this business since April, 1903 or 1904—April, 1904.

Q.—Did William J. Keliher ever deposit with you any sums of money? A.—William J. Keliher in 1906 gave me $375 to pay my license.

Q.—That is lent it to you? A.—Lent it to me.

Q.—Which you repaid, I suppose? A.—Oh, yes.

Q.—Did he at any times leave any of his own money in your safe? A.—Well, at the time of the ball betting when he was going to a ball game he might—William J. Keliher might come into the store and take some money out and I would take a piece of wrapping paper and wrap it up and put it in the safe, and I would give it back to him. I would put it in the safe for him, I would keep it safe.

Q.—At other times did he leave any money with you? A.—Sometimes at night going by the store he would ask me to put some in the safe, or jewelry.

Q.—You mean by those occasions he would simply put it in as a package and take it out as a package? A.—Yes.

SUFFRAGISTS START ON LONG HIKE TOMORROW

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—Here is today's revised list, including ten women and two members of the opposite sex, of those who have pledged their word of honor that they'll cover about every inch of the 225-mile pilgrimage from this city to Washington which starts tomorrow:

"General" Rosalie Gardiner Jones, "Colonel" Ida C. Craft, Surgeon-General Lavinia Dock, Mrs. Mary Baird, Mrs. John E. Boldt, Miss Phoebe Hawn, Mrs. Mai Morgan, Miss Martha Kintscher and Miss Ethel Patterson, all of New York; Miss Constance Lloepp of Washington, Mrs. George Wendt and George Wendt, Jr., of Albany, N. Y., and Ernest Stevens of Philadelphia.

That makes twelve. There'll be thirteen in the ranks of the "All the way through" pilgrims. The thirteenth is Miss Elizabeth Freeman. She, however, isn't going to hike. She'll ride in a little yellow wagon, acting as advance agent. Also as her duties will be to hustle forward and apprise villagers that the hikers are on the way, Incidentally, Mrs. Freeman will expound equal franchise from her little wagon to hold the attention of the villagers until the main body of the pilgrimage arrives.

"General" Craft will act as the official schedule. She'll wear a little speedometer on her left hip. Every time she takes a step the little machine will measure the distance.

"We hope to maintain an average of about thirteen or fourteen miles a day," declared the Colonel today. "Some days we'll travel as many as twenty-five miles. The next day we'll maybe walk only five or six miles."

STOP BOARD FROM ENFORCING 80-CENT GAS AT HAVERHILL

Sitting in the proceedings of the Haverhill Gas Light Company against the Massachusetts Board of Gas and Electric Light Commissioners and State Attorney-General Swift, Judge Frederick Dodge of the Circuit Bench, Judge Arthur L. Brown of the United States Circuit Court of Rhode Island and Judge James M. Morton, Jr., of the United States District Court of Massachusetts, today entered a decree restraining the defendants from enforcing their order to make the company in question charge not in excess of 80 cents per thousand feet for the use of gas.

The decree stipulates that the Haverhill Gas Light Company must turn over to Clerk Charles F. Darling of the United States District Court all the moneys collected from 1,000 consumers in excess of 80 cents per thousand feet. The company now charges 85 cents, so that tomorrow it will handle 5 cents from each customer.

DE FOUQUIERES TO COME HERE FEB. 26

Andre de Fouquieres, the French author of "Boudoirs," will come to Boston next evening only on February 26, at Copley Hall, for a special subscription performance. He will show his daring, natural color pictures of "The Persian Ball."

Boston is to have a chance to see "The Yellow Jacket" this month. It will follow "Milestones" at the Tremont Theatre.

Angus Hamilton, F. R. G. S., who comes to Tremont Temple for three Thursday afternoons, February 24 and 25 with his description of "The War in the Balkans," illustrated by actual scenes made at the front in his capacity of war correspondent for the Central News Association of London. He was also equipped with a motion picture camera, and all the films were from the Turkish side to which he was assigned.

Indorsed by All Her Leading Physicians and Has Long List of Successes to Its Credit.

Switzerland has lately been producing a wonderful remedy, which for the last two years has come to America by storm by its wonderful work in the cure of consumptives.

So confirmed have been the successes and so great the demand that arrangements have been made to have it being imported into this country in large quantities.

Although this amazing remedy is now only a few months established, it is agreeable to the most delicate stomach and aids the digestion to such a degree that the patient takes on weight rapidly. It is especially recommended for the early stages of its being entirely free from harmful and narcotic drugs, and can be given to the youngest child with perfect safety. It is one of the most successful cures of the disease.

Additional testimonials from well known people can be obtained in this country from the Sirolin Company, 29 Broadway, New York City, Room 1503. Druggists Doing Business in All Sections.

MRS. MAYME FISHER LLOYD, of Boston and Kentucky, former actress, secretly divorced from Demarest Lloyd, millionaire Boston yachtsman.

CLUBMAN LLOYD SECRETLY FREED FROM ACTRESS

That Demarest Lloyd, millionaire yachtsman and prominent society man of Boston, a Harvard graduate, was secretly divorced from his wife, Mayme Fisher Lloyd of Kentucky, became known today.

A prominent young society man of the Back Bay district was named as co-respondent but the papers were impounded by the court. The decree was granted after a late session before Judge Dubuque on Tuesday night, January 31.

The libel was filed on the second of last November. Since then Mrs. Lloyd lived on Gainsboro street, but is now said to be in her home in Kentucky. She is now in Boston. The couple had lived at No. 3 Brimmer street and seemed very happy. Lloyd married Miss Fisher when he was still a student at Harvard. She was said to be an actress.

He was born in Chicago in 1885 and is connected with some of the best families in Boston. He is said to be worth $10,000,000. In addition to attending to the care of his estate from his office on Devonshire street, he is also much interested in yachting. He captured the Eastern Yacht Club prize last year.

A year ago he gained considerable notoriety by engineering mysterious trip to the Caribbean Sea in search of hidden treasure, with two other Harvard men. They were Arthur Cooper and John J. Fallon. They sailed on the yacht Seneca with a carefully collected outfit of dynamite and other New England sailor parts.

CHALMERS GAINS IN N. H. BALLOTING

CONCORD, N. H., Feb. 11.—There was no choice on the twenty-first day's balloting for United States Senator here today. Thomas Chalmers of Manchester, Republican, gained eighteen votes, and the probability is that if there is no radical change in the balloting before the end of the week Edward N. Pearson, the regular Republican caucus nominee, will be withdrawn and Chalmers made the party candidate. Mr. Chalmers is a State Senator and Congressional candidate later. The ballot follows:

Whole number of votes	414
Necessary for a choice	208
Henry F. Hollis, D.	201
Edward N. Pearson, R.	162
Thomas Chalmers, R.	21
Albert P. Bell, Prog.	20
Gordon Woodbury, D.	5
William J. Britton, Prog.	2
Herbert D.	1

Sold to Talbot Company.

The Talbot Company of Boston, the recently organized company which has purchased the entire stock of The J. R. Barnard Company, Inc., of Boston, will continue the business of the latter concern in its present location, one of the largest established concerns in New England, which is indicated annually at about $250,000.

MAKES YOUR BACKACHE QUICKLY DISAPPEAR

A Few Doses Relieve All Such Miseries, Bladder Weakness, Kidney Trouble and Rheumatism Promptly Vanish

It is no longer necessary for any one to suffer with backaching, kidney trouble, have disagreeable bladder and urinary disorders to contend with, or be tortured with rheumatism, stiff joints, and its heart-wrenching pains, for the new discovery, Croxone, quickly and surely relieves all such troubles.

Croxone is the most wonderful remedy yet devised for ridding the system of uric acid and driving out all the poisonous impurities which cause such trouble. It is entirely different from all other remedies. It is not like anything else ever used for the purpose. It acts on the principle of clenching out the poisons and removing the cause.

It soaks right in through the walls, membranes and linings, like water in a sponge, purifies, cleanses and heals, and the kidneys sift out and filter away, all the uric acid and poisons from the blood and when the kidneys and urinary organs clean, strong, healthy and well.

It matters not how long you have suffered, how sad you are, or how ill you have used, the very principle of Croxone is such that it is practically impossible to take it into the human system without results. There is nothing else on earth like it. It starts to work the minute you take it and relieves you the first time you use it.

If you suffer with pains in your back and side, or have any signs of kidney, bladder trouble, or rheumatism, such as puffy swellings under the eyes or in the feet and ankles, if you are nervous, tired and run down, or bothered with urinary disorders, Croxone will quickly relieve you of your misery. You can secure an original package of Croxone at trifling cost from any druggist or druggist. All druggists are authorized to personally return the purchase price if it fails in a single case.

A CHILD'S WASTE CLOGGED BOWELS

Makes It Cross, Peevish, Restless and Feverish—If Tongue Is Coated, Give "Syrup of Figs."

Children dearly love to take delicious "Syrup of Figs," and nothing else cleans and regulates their tender little stomachs, livers and 30 feet of bowels so promptly and thoroughly.

Children get bilious and constipated just like grown-up. Then they get sick, the tongue is coated, stomach sour, breath bad; they don't eat or rest well; they become feverish, cross, irritable and don't want to play. Listless Mothers—for your child's sake don't force the little one to swallow nauseating castor oil, violent calomel or harsh irritants like Cathartic pills. A teaspoonful of Syrup of Figs will have your child smiling and happy again in just a few hours. Syrup of Figs will gently clean, sweeten and regulate the stomach, make the liver active and move on and out of the bowels all the constipated matter, the sour bile, undigested food, clogged-up waste and poisons, without causing cramps or griping.

With Syrup of Figs you are not drugging or injuring your children. Being composed entirely of luscious figs, senna and aromatics, it cannot be harmful. Full directions for children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the package.

Ask your druggist for the full name, "Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna," prepared by the California Fig Syrup Co. This is the delicious tasting, genuine old reliable. Refuse anything else offered.

The Comfort and Economy of Tourist Sleeping Cars in Traveling to the Pacific Coast

I would like to explain to you, just what a Tourist Sleeping Car is, what conveniences and comforts they have, and how you can save money by joining one of our personally conducted parties, which go through to the Pacific coast every week in one of these cars, escorted by a special conductor employed by the "Burlington Route" to look after your comfort.

For many years the Burlington Route Personally Conducted Excursions to California have been widely known for thoroughly good service. The whole idea of these parties is to provide a way for people of moderate means to make the California trip comfortably and in thoroughly good hands, and at the same time at small expense. Musterole Better Than Mustard Plaster

MUSTEROLE is oil of mustard combined with other simples used in home medicine.

It is a clean, white ointment that you rub on—and the pain is gone!

No plaster—no mess—no blister!

It does all the work of the good old fashioned mustard plaster, but does it better.

Millions of jars of MUSTEROLE are sold annually.

Doctors and trained nurses recommend it to patients; it is constantly used in many of the large hospitals.

MUSTEROLE is what Twentieth Century science has made of the remedy that your mother and grandmother depended on. It gives instant relief from Sore Throat, Bronchitis, Tonsilitis, Croup, Stiff Neck, Asthma, Neuralgia, Headache, Congestion, Pleurisy, Rheumatism, Lumbago, Pains and Aches of the Back or Joints, Sprains, Sore Muscles, Bruises, Chilblains, Frosted Feet, Colds of the Chest (it prevents Pneumonia).

MUSTEROLE
WILL NOT BLISTER

At your druggist's—in 25c and 60c jars and a special large hospital size for $2.50.

Accept no substitute. If your druggist can't supply you, send 25c or 60c to the MUSTEROLE Company, Cleveland, Ohio, and we will mail you a jar, postage prepaid.

Tells how MUSTEROLE relieves:

FRED GUNTZ, Piano Tuner, Cleveland, O., writes: "Suffered with rheumatism. The doctors treated me for different kinds of rheumatism, but failed to cure. I tried MUSTEROLE, bought it from a local druggist. In a short time I was entirely free from pain. I recommend it to all sufferers."

DR. HAYES AGAIN ELECTED

Dr. Edward Hayes, of Roxbury, was today elected a member of the Governor's Council from the Seventh district, defeating Dr. Thomas H. Garrity, of Dorchester, by a vote of 16 to 14. Dr. Hayes was elected last year, but was defeated for renomination by Dr. Garrity.

ANOTHER SUCCESS IS CREDITED TO SCIENTIFIC SKILL

"No man or woman can do their full share of work when they are overworked and run down," said John Hayes of Weld, who is assisting in reproducing Tona Vita. "Hence the old saying that 'a sick man is but half a man.'

"I have been very gratified in rending some of the testimonials, which indicate that work has become easy since taking the new tonic, Tona Vita.

"Michael W. Hayes, 56 Dalton St., Cambridge, stated as follows:

"'I am and have been troubled with severe pains for a long time. I tried everything anyone would suggest. Hearing of Tona Vita, I decided to give it a trial, and can truthfully say it has done me a world of good and I can most heartily recommend it.'

"No man can work satisfactorily who is troubled with Nervousness, Ill-Health, Tona Vita, by relieving this condition, makes life and work a pleasure.

"Symptoms other than Mr. Hayes suffered from which may denote the presence of Nervous Debility are any one of the following: Poor appetite, dull pains in the head, sense of fullness after eating, loss of weight and that run-down feeling."

Tona Vita is being handled by all the leading druggists in Boston, who are reporting remarkable sales.

PATTEN, GUILTY, PAYS $4,000 FINE

Greater Boston's GREAT SALE

If you didn't come Monday you surely missed something. However, there's a silver lining to this cloud, for—New Goods are arriving daily, so that we expect

WEDNESDAY WILL BE THE BEST DAY OF ALL

Monday's tremendous success demonstrated the possibility of distributing double and treble the usual amount of merchandise by the Greater Gilchrist store.

Why?

Because of the remarkable offerings—just the goods people wanted at less than usual prices.

In a word—Thrifty shoppers found that they could buy standard quality goods at lower prices than anywhere else at Gilchrist's.

We regret that even with hundreds of additional salespeople we could not give our usual service Monday. We were simply overwhelmed. Extra provisions have been made, however, and we believe we can promise the best of service today and the remaining days of this

LABOR OPENS FIGHT FOR 23 BILLS OFFERED

Organized labor today formally opened its 1913 hatrid for legislative measures for laboring men and women when representatives of the State Federation of Labor, and labor-union organizations in the State, appeared before the legislative Committee on the Judiciary. The hearing was held in Room 249 at the State House, the largest room in the building.

Senator Stearns of Cambridge, chairman of the committee, announced that twenty-three bills are before the committee for consideration. The session opened at 10:30 a. m. Senator Stearns announced that the morning session would last until 1:00 p. m., if it was would then be taken until 5 p. m. and continue until 7 p. m. or even until 11 o'clock if necessary, to dispose of all the measures.

The bills ranged from amendments to the Workingmen's Compensation Act, to strike bulletin. There were bills concerning picketing, and one providing that the labor organizations shall not be held responsible for damages arising from disturbances. But most of the bills pertained to the Workingmen's Compensation Act. The first speaker was Henry Sterling, chairman of the Legislative Committee of the State branch of the American Federation of Labor.

MRS. DENNETT, SUFFRAGIST, GETS DIVORCE

Mrs. Mary Ware Dennett, a prominent suffragist leader, whose suit for the custody of her two children caused a sensation in Cambridge in 1909, was today granted a decree of divorce from her husband, Hartley Dennett, formerly a prominent Boston architect, and a Harvard graduate.

Although the case was marked on the contested list, Dennett did not appear to defend his case. He filed a lengthy statement. The real issue, which will be fought out in the Cambridge Court, will be for the custody of the two children, Carolina Lawlor and Byron, seven.

Mr. Dennett, who is now living at Alstead, N. H., at the time of the first suit, in 1909, publicly admitted his love for the wife of Dr. H. Lincoln Chase of Brookline, and throughout the suit defended his action as that of a pure mind which had found its "soul mate."

Dr. Chase himself set the stamp of his approval on Dennett's love for Mrs. Chase, and called it a "beautiful example of affection which results from the mind."

Troubles Began in 1909.

The marital troubles of the Dennett family began shortly before 1909, nine years after their marriage. They had lived in Boston until 1905, and later moved to Framingham, where they lived until the action brought by Mrs. Dennett.

Dennett told the court during the first hearing that his ideals permitted him to "love all women," and that because his love for Mrs. Chase was strong, his love for his own wife was no less.

Dr. Chase's testimony in that famous suit, and his defense of Dennett as a true friend, were as startling as some of the ideals which he gave as his own.

Love Wife "Like Brother."

Mrs. Dennett wished to monopolize the love of her husband, simply because she was married to him. Marrying one does not gain a monopoly of love," he declared.

Later he declared that although Mr. Dennett and Mrs. Chase might have been unconventional, no one need place a harsher construction upon it.

"They kissed in public," he said, "but it was no violation of moral or statutory law, and I was aware of the practice." He "loved Mr. Dennett like a brother," he concluded.

WAYSIDE INN TALES' AT TREMONT TEMPLE INTEREST MANY

For nearly two hours Mary J. Townsend Russell is holding the continuous interest of audiences at Tremont Temple in his picture readings dramatizing the "Tales of a Wayside Inn." So thoroughly has Mr. Russell become imbued with the spirit of "The Tales" that from the opening until the end of his readings there is not a dull moment.

When Mr. Russell first conceived the idea of "The Tales" he collaborated with several artists who each chose a tale to interpret in a series of paintings which are thrown on the screen in beautiful colorative effects during the progress of the readings. Meantime a hidden orchestra dispenses music specially adapted to the readings.

During his presentation Mr. Russell stands in the spotlight where his own dramatic expressions, which add greatly to his work, can be observed by the audience.

STATION AGENT FIRES ON CROWD AND WOUNDS 2

TAUNTON, Feb. 11.—Two men were shot and a score of others, several of whom were women, fled for safety today when Ralph Villers, station agent at the East Freetown station, between here and New Bedford, opened fire on them with two revolvers from a window of his apartments over the depot.

Charles McWhinney of East Freetown was shot in the hip, and Harris Chase of the same town received a bullet in the leg. Both men fell on the platform of the station. McWhinney was taken to a physician here and Chase was hurried to New Bedford for treatment.

The shooting occurred at 7:45 p. m. The waiting platform was crowded with people waiting for the arrival of the train to this city. Suddenly several shots were heard. McWhinney and Chase cried aloud that they were shot. The others scattered in all directions.

Thomas Clark, the town's constable, was summoned. He organized a posse with fifteen men and surrounded the station. Ira Villers in the window. Clark told him to come down. Villers said he would. He held two big revolvers in his hands.

As Villers left the room, Clark and the others hid behind the table with guns levelled at the door through which Villers was to come. The latter walked slowly through the door of the office, a revolver in each hand.

"Put down those revolvers," said Clark.

WEs that Villers placed them on a table. Clark and the officers then pounced upon Villers and bound him hand and foot with a rope. He was sent to the local police station and locked on the charge of committing an assault on McWhinney and Chase with a loaded revolver.

He will be taken to New Bedford to be examined as to his sanity.

LINCOLN SERVICE IN KING'S CHAPEL

COMRADE SAVES EX-SOLDIER FROM DEATH IN FIRE

NORTH ADAMS, Feb. 11.—In an attempt to save some few prized possessions and a little sum of money from his burning home, Edward M. Kimpton of Clarksburg, fifty, a veteran of the Spanish War, was so severely burned that his recovery is doubted. He was rescued from the blazing attic, where he was overcome, by a former comrade in arms, Earl Martin, who jumped with him from an attic window.

RADCLIFFE GIRLS ARE BACK TO THEIR LECTURE ROUTINE

After being closed for about three weeks for the mid-year examinations, Radcliffe College has once more resumed its routine of lectures and recitations.

The 587 girls are all in their places in the class rooms. For some this means beginning new work. For the majority, however, it means resuming the incomplete course.

All the girls are eager to learn the returns from the examinations. This is the chief subject of conversation.

NEWS OF ATTRACTIONS AT THE BOSTON PLAYHOUSES

BIG HOUSE AT THE ST. JAMES FOR VAUDEVILLE

The St. James Theatre opened as a vaudeville house under the management of Marcus Loew yesterday, and from early afternoon to late evening the auditorium was crowded. If the first entertainment is any indication of what Mr. Loew is going to give at his Back Bay theatre Boston playgoers may feel assured of another first-class vaudeville theatre. The St. James is ideally equipped.

One of the biggest successes last evening was William F. Powell and Company in the farce comedy, "Books." This was well received both afternoon and evening. Other features were Brady and Mahoney, the Hebrew Fireman and Foreman; Casto Brothers, equilibrists; Livingston and Fields, in a singing and musical offering; Egan and DeMar, in a dancing act; Beth Stone in story dancing and Beth Stone in character studies.

The pictures which Mr. Loew will offer at the St. James are among the best in the country.

HELEN LOWELL SCORES IN 'THE RED PETTICOAT'

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

The professional joke makers have so long helped support themselves at the expense of the loquacious barber that there was no great surprise at finding Miss Helen Lowell pursuing a comical course as a correspondence school barber at the Shubert last evening. It was bound to come. The human mind that presented Miss Lowell as elegiacal as a lady barber was at least a faithful performer in the world of fun, for that is exactly where Miss Lowell carried you in "The Red Petticoat."

And she made rather easy work of it, too, if you consider that "The Red Petticoat," by no stretch of imagination, could be grouped with opera comique, or other semi-pretentious musical entertainments. It was plainly an evening of farce with music, and Miss Lowell made the most of it by placing her own familiar drolleries wizard play would be the most good.

The regular play goer will never forget the grotesque Mr. Hazy of "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," which may account for the friendliness of last evening's audience. Certainly no newly projected star ever found herself in better or more concentrated company. Miss Lowell had next cause for gratification in that respect, for her audience was with her from the start.

Began with Promise.

No musical play of the season began with better promise than "The Red Petticoat." Its first act was brisk, entertaining—and encouraging. You had a lovely Western setting, including the conventional cowboys and cowgirls to say nothing of Miss Lowell and her troupe of trained masqueraders. There were indications of a lively and happy evening, if only the cowboy tenor could be prevailed upon not to sing. You could feel that tenor in the cool February air. It is only fair to this tenor, however, to say that vocally he was more agreeable than his associates. Joseph Phillips, who looked like a romantic song bird in spite of his Wild West make-up, handled himself splendidly, and immediately set himself right with his audience.

Louise Mink and Grace Field mingled sweetly in the romances of Lost River. Miss Mink breaking forth in an occasional song and Miss Field proving herself a graceful dancer. Frances Kemper was attributed a fair share of feminine villainy in a broad-shouldered, ample style that made her dangerous at all times.

Of the men in the company, Donald Macdonald was a juvenile cowboy with a Broadway accent, and William Prairette and Henry Norman gave support to the proceedings that was both solid and substantial. Alf DeMar labored industriously to make his German comedy fit the mining camp atmosphere, and Wallace Owen, in one brief scene in the third act, atoned for everything by giving the evening its heartiest laugh.

Many Delicious Moments.

"The Red Petticoat" was diverting and easy to take. Miss Lowell gave it the best of her own particular sense of humor, which was both refined and infectious. She was a very comical young woman.

Musically, "The Red Petticoat" was pleasing in a small way. One of its numbers, "The Ragtime Restaurant," sung and danced by Mr. Macdonald, Miss Mink and Miss Field, was novel, and "Peaches and Cream" gave Mr. Phillips his best opportunity to pour a melody of love into Miss Mink's ear. "Since the Days of Grandmamma" led Miss Lowell to the footlights without her grotesque make-up. The sensation was distinctly pleasant.

There are many delicious moments in "The Red Petticoat," and most of them led straight to Miss Lowell. She inspired good humor.

Orpheum Theatre

Besides the new vaudeville bill at the Orpheum Theatre yesterday, the performance last evening was enlivened by a professional song contest. As on the Monday before, it made a great hit with the audience. Featured in the vaudeville bill were Belle Dixon, a dainty comedienne; the Moffat-Clare Trio, in acrobatic dancing, and Harry Thompson in "His Honor, the Mayor of the Bowery."

Howard Athenaeum

"The Rosebuds" dropped in at the Old Howard and began a week's festivities. There were several incidental vaudeville features.

Grand Opera House

The new show at the Grand Opera House yesterday was Miner's American, in which there were a score of lively young women.

Bowdoin Square Theatre

"The Five Old Soldiers," veterans of the Civil War, were featured in the new bill at the Bowdoin Square Theatre yesterday.

Miss Lowell and Mr. Carson at Shubert in "Red Petticoat"

Globe Theatre

One of the most beautiful riding acts seen here in a long time headed the Globe program yesterday. Ella Bradna and Fred Derrick, former equestrian stars of the Barnum and Bailey circus, with three handsome horses, were the closing feature of the show. The Herbert-Germain Trio of acrobats, contributed some wonderful as well as comic stunts, and Weber, Beck and Fraser, the "Rathskeller Trio," were well received with their singing and piano playing. The Raymond Midgets, a clever pair of little folks, had a singing and dancing specialty, and "Jake" Raymond proved a wonderfully magnetic little comedian. Lillian Carter was a "coon" singer of real ability and Billy Barron, an instrumentalist, was well above the average. The Oxavel had an amusing comedy juggling novelty. The other features included the Pathe Weekly and a new list of motion pictures.

"Haensel und Gretel" at Holiday Matinee.

The last matinee performances of "Haensel und Gretel" for this season is scheduled for tomorrow afternoon at the Boston Opera House. Together with an act from "Coppelia," the Humperdinck fairy opera. It forms an ideal holiday attraction. Mme. Schumann-Heink takes the role of the witch.

Aside from Mme. Schumann-Heink the cast will be made up entirely of American singers.

Weingartner Says Farewell on Sunday.

Felix Weingartner will make his last appearance for the present season as a concert conductor at the Boston Opera House orchestral concert next Sunday afternoon. Likewise Mme. Weingartner-Marcel will sing her farewell. The program will be chosen chiefly from the director's own compositions.

Waldron's Casino

"The Queens of Paris" was the title of the new burlesque show at Waldron's Casino Theatre yesterday. It had a full quota of pretty girls.

Plays That Remain

"Bunty Pulls the Strings" remains at the Majestic, where it continues to draw capacity crowds.

"Thirteen," with George Arliss, is now on the two final weeks of its engagement at the Tremont.

"Believe Me, Xantippe," continues at the Castle Square Theatre, with no signs of diminishing interest.

"The Woman" entered upon the two final weeks of its stay at the Park Theatre last evening.

"Milestones" began its fifth week at the Tremont Theatre last evening.

"The Garden of Allah" is proving a safe and sound Lenten attraction at the Boston Theatre.

Miss Billie Burke and "The Mind the Paint Girl" are enjoying prosperity at the Hollis.

"Ziegfeld Follies," at the Colonial, will begin its sixth week tomorrow evening.

Loew's South End

Picture patrons will find the bill at Loew's South End Theatre especially attractive this week, for a big spectacular film called "Satin, or the Drama of Humanity," is featured. This picture proved to be one of the most thrilling of any ever seen in Boston. Its story shows the development of the "evil spirit" from the beginning of man to the present time, and with its five reels takes more than a hour to present. Not only is "Satan" perfect mechanically, but it is acted by brilliant European artists. Other films were also exhibited.

Premier Theatre

The feature film in the new bill at the Premier Theatre yesterday was called "Feodalism," and it proved more than interesting to the day's audiences. The story that it told was one of romance and tragedy, and was melodramatic to the core. A half dozen other engaging films were presented, as well as a new list of illustrated songs.

New Palace Theatre

"The Palace of the Flames," which has been called one of the most exciting melodramas ever turned into a picture film, was featured in the new bill at the Palace Theatre yesterday. This is a four-part film and tells a story containing many sensational and thrilling incidents. As a picture it was attractive and as a photo-play it held attention from the start.

Gaiety Theatre

Louis Roble's Knickerbocker burlesquers began a week's fun making at the Gaiety Theatre yesterday. Heading the company was Roger Imhoff, whose comical ways have always kept him interesting to burlesque patrons. Of course, there was the usual collection of good looking girls who sang and danced and cut up in regular burlesque style. The vehicle presented was a two-act musical piece called "Casey, the Porter."

Kinemacolor Moving Picture Feature of Bill at the National

The Kinemacolor moving pictures which are being presented to the patrons of the National Theatre proved an attractive feature at yesterday's performances. These pictures are the most remarkable color motion pictures ever shown in this city at popular prices. The one which impressed the audience mostly was from "Bud to Blossom."

Marie Fenton, one of the cleverest of singing comediennes, headed the vaudeville bill. She sang several catchy songs and drew rounds of applause. The Five Sullys appeared in a clever one-act playlet, full of screams, entitled "The Information Bureau." Red and Nellie Heim, the clever juvenile stars, were particularly pleasing. Bob Matthews and Al Shayne, in their original novelty "A Chinatown Fantasy," did exceptionally well. Ed Gingras, who holds many world's balancing records, juggled huge iron balls as if they were marbles.

Among the others who appeared were Joe Daly's Troubadours, clever singers; Zido and Hoot, Billy Rogers, a musical minstrel; Fields and La Adelia, singing, toe dancing and comedy, and Hal Sweet and Company in a musical production, "After the Hunt."

Scenic Temple

A complete change of vaudeville and motion pictures was made at the Scenic Temple yesterday. Lenna Howe's orchestra gave an incidental concert.

MISS KIDDER HEADLINER AT B. F. KEITH'S

Miss Kathryn Kidder, the star of "Salamombo," "Madame Sans Gene" and other stirring productions, was welcomed on her debut in vaudeville by an audience that packed B. F. Keith's Theatre. Miss Kidder might be called the headliner, and topnotch she and her act proved, but there are so many big features on the bill that the show might be called an all-star variety of good things.

Miss Kidder was applauded again and again in her condensed version of "Sans Gene"—the washerwoman duchess. The characters are Napoleon, played by Walter Wilson; Count de Morey, Marshal Lefebvre and Madam Sans Gene. Those who remember Miss Kidder's capital work in the legitimate should see her vaudeville Sans Gene, while those who haven't have a good treat in store.

Another hearty reception was given Professor Ota Gygi, billed as the violinist to the King of Spain. He played superbly and thrilled his audience again and again. Max Hart's six Hopkins, composed of four brothers and two sisters, did some great dancing. The Royal Kitamura Japanese troupe performed some startling acrobatic feats. Jack Conly and Margaret Webb scored in the musical absurdity, "The Storm."

Nowles and Erwood made a hit as the cool man and the maid. Delmore and Lee kept the house entertained with their study in black and white. "Three wonderful singers" were in good voice and won a number of encores, and Leroy, Wilson and Tom kept the audience in roars as The Three Crazy Men from Frisco. Clown Zeatbus' dogs of all nations did their stunts well. Every act is worth seeing.

TORTURED BY UGLY ITCHING ERUPTION

Doctor Recommended Resinol. Half of a 50c Jar Cured It.

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 5, 1912.—"My little daughter was taken with a very small spot on the back of her hand. It grew larger and caused her more trouble. When she would scratch it, it would bleed and get very ugly looking, so I doctored it myself for about a year, and at last it broke out on both knees, and when she would go to bed she would scratch, and was so tortured and suffered so from the itching, that I took her to our doctor, who recommended Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment.

Improved with first application.

"I sent for samples and after the first application the itching and inflammation was improved, and I kept it up night and morning, and by the time the sample was gone she complained very little, so I got a fifty-cent jar, and before that was half gone the trouble had entirely disappeared." (Signed) Mrs. Maude Schmechel, 2737 Presbury Street.

Nothing we can say of Resinol equals what others, such as Mrs. Schmechel, say of it. If you are suffering from itching, burning skin troubles, pimples, blackheads, dandruff, chapped face and hands, ulcers, boils, stubborn sores, or piles, it will cost you nothing to try Resinol Ointment and Soap. Just send to Dept. 2-T, Resinol Chem. Co., Baltimore, Md., for a free sample of each. Sold by all druggists.

"MUCH UNHAPPINESS DUE TO SHAPELESS FIGURE," SAYS CRITIC

The Charm and Beauty of a Well Rounded Figure Adds Much to Womanly Happiness

"Education is responsible for the gradual disappearance of angular lines among women," writes a beauty expert and critic in Bradner's. "It is just within the past few years that women discovered it an easy matter to correct Nature's fault, and today, with gallol as a tissue builder, scrawniness and hollows are quickly banished.

"This tonic is not a fat-maker and can be prepared in privacy by making a syrup with one and a half cupfuls sugar and a pint of water, to which is added an ounce of gallol. The dose is two teaspoonfuls before meals."—Advertisement.

GRAY HAIR TURNS ITS NATURAL COLOR AFTER APPLYING SAGE TEA

Mixed with Sulphur, It Darkens Beautifully and Takes Off Dandruff.

Almost every one knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also cures dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago, the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays skilled chemists do this better than ourselves. By asking at any drug store for the ready-to-use product—called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy"—you will get a large bottle for about 50 cents. Some druggists make their own, but it's usually too sticky, so insist upon getting "Wyeth's," which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is the best remedy for dandruff, dry, feverish, itchy scalp and to stop falling hair.

Folks like "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur" because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly, says a well-known downtown druggist. You dampen a sponge or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This requires but a few moments, by morning the gray hair disappears and after another application or two is restored to its natural color and looks even more beautiful and glossy than ever.

The Punderers

An adventure of the famous Captain Kettle

BY CUTCLIFFE HYNE

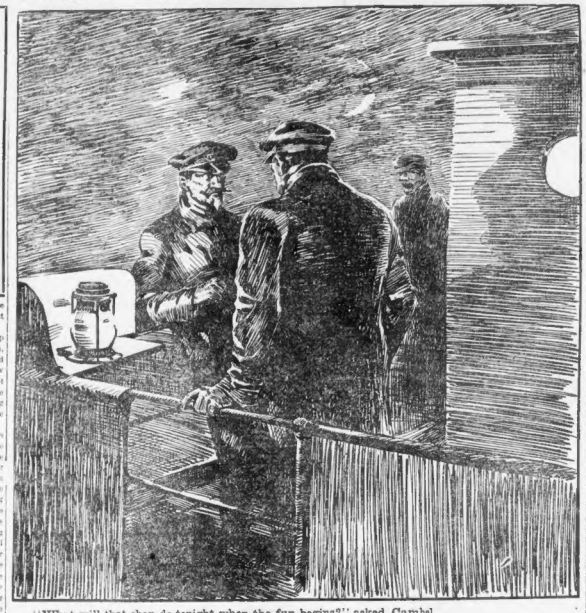
CAST OF CHARACTERS

Hamilton Fairfax	A shipping clerk
Amy Rivers	His fiancee
Captain Patrick Cambel	A schemer
Captain Owen Kettle	An adventurer
Theodore Shelf	Rich and unscrupulous
Mrs. Shelf	With social ambitions

What Has Gone Before

Captain Cambel and Mr. Shelf enter upon a scoundrelly plan to start a ship from England to New Orleans carrying £500,000 in gold, leave the ship lost in the Everglades, by passage which Cambel alone knows, and the specie saved. Shelf's firm—Marmaduke, Rivers & Shelf—is nearly bankrupt, and he has an extravagant wife who is ruining him, while Cambel is penniless, so they are willing to take the desperate risk, which means probable death to several. They put Captain Kettle in charge of the Port Edes, an unlucky tramp steamer, and he sets out with Cambel and a worthless crew. Cambel puts a fake bomb in the engine bunkers, and when it is discovered the crew are in terror. Thus Kettle and Cambel make sure they are cowardly lot. Captain Kettle's domineering ways bring about a mutiny. The men's spokesmen are a Dutchman and a quartermaster. Kettle cows the crew with his revolvers and orders the spokesmen to ship a gun. He promises to shoot the loser.

Now Go on with the Story



"What will that chap do tonight when the fun begins?" asked Cambel.

"Bolt like a rat at the first alarm. He'd show pluck if he were paid for it, would my third mate, but not being paid, he's taking best care possible of his ugly hide."

PART I.

THE German put something between his dished palms and shook it violently, and then climbed one hand over the rail and tossed it into the full blaze of the binnacle light. The quartermaster called loudly for order unwrapped his grimy fingers and showed. The coin was a ballpenny, British to the uppermost. The quartermaster buttoned his jacket and drew himself up to face the upper bridge.

"Hold on your hand."

It shot up at full length, fingers spayed out. Then crack! And a bullet ripped through the middle of his palm. The fellow let out a short pen of surprise and clapped his wounded member rightly under his armpit. The men around him, utterly cowed, stood in frozen silence, and Captain Owen Kettle, from the bridge, waved slow patterns over them with a revolver still ete. Then he examined both weapons into his jacket pockets again, and gave orders sharply and with quickness.

"Watch below, get forward and turn in. Watch on duty, go to your posts. Quartermaster of the watch, tumble up here. Southwest and by sou'."

A quartermaster ran breathy up the bridge ladder.

"Sweat and by sou' it is, sir," he replied. It was the only comment any one of the crew made to Captain Kettle on his method.

Tonight

ANOTHER day and another sky. Now the blue gulf water was as leaden and dense as that one looks upon to a hard North Sea gale, and the heavens overhead were as foul with lurid grays which raced one another in sliding chase till they were lost in the Northern mist drifts.

The steamer rolled heavily to a steep beam sea, and, when they could be seen, the lees of her lower decks rumpled and aft gleamed as though it had been newly coated with varnish. But this was not often. For four minutes out of every five they were filled with a churning, hissing growl of green and cotton white which the scuppers could only empty piecemeal.

The time was evening, twenty hours after the quelling of the mutiny, and the three remants of the upper bridge were the only human beings on any of the outer decks. On the midship grading stood a lighter headed quartermaster holding on to the spokes of the steam wheel, browsing on plug tobacco and keeping his eyes mechanically fixed on the jumping compass card. Alternately climbing and descending as the bridge swung under him, the third mate took his own constitutional in rather high boots with hands thrust into the waist belt of his breeches. As officer of the watch every time he passed the binnacle he faced front and took a regulation peep around the foggy saloon lip of heffing with an utter blank lack of interest, and the face wooden and gnarled as a walnut shell. He was an elderly man, the third mate, and the sea held no more surprise for him and no more interests and no more pleasures. If ever he had ambition he had lost it years since. His aim in life was to hold a position in life of small responsibility and earn a monthly wage with the smallest possible exertion either mental or physical.

The remaining occupant of the bridge sat on the camp stool under the lee of the dodger, with his red beard on his chest, his slippered feet stuck out in front, his elbows crooked out behind him, and hands deep in his jacket pockets. Every time the third mate's footsteps neared him his eyes opened for an instant, flashed around to the right hand angle of their orbits. Between whiles he slept. It was owing to the faculty of liberally snatching moments of rest, that Captain Kettle at the end of his twenty hours spell on the upper bridge was as fresh as though he had just got up from a clear night's sleep. The watchfulness was necessary. As the experienced skipper was quite aware, fully half the hands would have gladly tossed him overboard if they could save crippled him without danger to themselves. Presently, however, he dropped his dose with a snap and slewed around to face the head of the bridge ladder, entirely wakeful. A head showed itself, black-haired, with a clean shaven, bright determined face. The corresponding body followed soon, tall, muscular.

"Ah, Mr. Cambel, you brought me some provender, thanks indeed. What, sandwich and tea. Couldn't be better."

"I have whiskey in my pocket."

"Not for me now. Wait, till we get ashore and I'll booze with any man till his heart's content. The game I'm on now is like a boatrace—if a man wants to win he's got to diet himself accordingly."

The third mate, to show to any chance onlooker that he was not in sympathy with the unpopular captain, planted himself in the angle of the lee dodger, which was the greatest distance that the ties of duty would allow him to depart. Kettle, with an acrid grin, drew his companion's attention to this move.

"What'll that chap do tonight when the fun begins?" asked Cambel.

"Bolt, like a rat at the first alarm. He'd show pluck if he was paid for it, would my third mate, but not being paid, he's taking best care possible of his ugly hide. He isn't a fellow you'd ever like a tight corner for its own sake. There's not an atom of sportsman about him."

Cambel laughed. "You're the other way on, Captain."

Kettle's face clouded. "It's a fact," he said. "Times I am that way curse my cantankerous luck."

"Your weakness in that direction came in handily for me yesterday."

"You're right, right all through. But, my soul, I'd half a mind to chip in with my revolver and grab what I could. It was a tempting chance, and it would have been a heap more profitable than what I got in. As for the bounty of the thing, there wasn't a pin to choose between it and this racket of yours and Mr. Shelf's. But it was the Dutchman's gall that put me off. If he'd held his silly jaw, and if those other blatherskeids had let me alone, I'd stand I was to hold the pistol-hand over them—well, the Port Edes would have coral rocks sporting through her bottom plates this minute. And I'd be a man of only a matter of three thousand to five thousand pounds. That's putting it straight."

Cambel Learns Something

"So," said Cambel, "I suppose I have to thank the same for carrying a sound windpipe this minute."

"No," replied Kettle, thoughtfully, "I don't think it. I fancy you'd have behaved reasonably over new deals, and then I'd have stood by you, especially," he added slowly and through from afortthought, "especially if those dogs thought you'd have been safer out of the way. What," he asked, with sudden frowns as though the subject annoyed him, "What have you been doing with yourself this afternoon?"

"Physicking a sick foreman principally. The stokehole temperature was 105 degrees, and as he amused himself drinking cold condenser water by the quart he gathered the somewhat natural consequence cramp in the stomach. They sent him up by the ash lift and your steward dosed him with chlorodyne and laudanum and the tincture of rhubarb. The result wasn't encouraging."

"Oh, there's never any knowing what to do with a sick stoker's insides, but one of these dings ought to fetch him."

"Perhaps one did, but the other two didn't seem to fit his ailment."

"Well, he had them for nothing, so I don't see what call he had to complain. I never saw such a crew for physic. They have drunk that big chest half dry as it is, and if I'd let them they'd have drunk it three times over. What did you do to the chap? Fill him up on the same again or try a pill? There's ten sorts of pills in the chest—beauties, some of them. You should have tried him on those little silver coated chaps. They're regular twisters."

"Well, you see, he was twisted enough already, poor devil, and if it hadn't been for the donkeyman holding him he'd have been overboard through the ash chute to be rid of his misery. So, as it was, I gave him a tumbler full of raw whiskey, and that seemed gradually to untie him out of his knots."

The Captain snorted: "You're greener than I thought, Mr. Cambel. If we'd been going on, you'd have had half the crew sick for a dose of that kind. They're bad enough after our sour doctor's physic, but for a tumbler of liquor and a spell of idleness an old sailor would have an ear and three toes cut off any day. However," he added, rising stiffly to his feet and stretching, "the chief and the donkey man will see that he doesn't malinger for long. They are none of them sweet on doing another man's work, that gang. High, ho! See that line of surf we're bringing over lee quarter?"

"The Dry Tortugas."

"The Dry Tortugas. There's a Yankee convict station on one of them."

Kettle grinned. "We shall have made enough westing soon, and then our course will be pretty nearly due north, so as to dodge the Gulf stream as much as possible, and," he added in a lower tone, "to get the ship as near as may be to your channel before we jettison the crew."

He lorked with his thumb toward the green-painted wooden Italian bark which was quartering apast less than a quarter of a mile away, right athwart the windy sunset. She was driving merrily homeward sealing her bows into the seas creamed against her cathheads and dark-ening her jibs with brine up more than half her height. She was methodically reducing sail, and a dozen sharp-lined picturesque tatterdemalions were aloft on the fourth topgallant yard hasmering the stiffening canvas into the bunts.

"The cowardly Dago," said Kettle. "That's always their way. Sing down to topsail as soon as it gets dark, even if there's only a cat'spaw blowing. By James, with a breeze like this I'd be carrying royals on that old tub. And yet," he went on with his beard in the heel of his fist and his eyes gazing out over the tumbling waters, "And yet they say there used to be poetry in a craft of that sort, while there never was and never will be with a steamer. I suppose the reason is that a chap has to be a man who knows nothing whatever about what he writes upon. I know some chaps who string verses many days who have been on a steamboat and revealed the amels of her not seen her lines and watched the engines at their work and get their make no sentry about it, but the old crew who wrote of wooden walls and rusty hearts of oak, why they knew no more about the thing than a London baby does of angels. And can you suppose, you who are a sailorman, that I believe you're right," said Cambel, thoughtfully, "and some day I now plans for a new Michael Scott will come ashore from the upper bridge, or from an electric lighted forecastle, or a forced draft engine room, and show it to us plainly, whereupon we shall swear that we saw it ourselves all along. But," he went on, with a sudden frown, "for the present let that drift. You and I have enough to think of in our own immediate prospects without speculating over a possible poet which is to arise."

"We have, but so much will be arranged by the chance of the moment that I didn't see that we can do much good by taking it further now. All arrangements that can be made ahead, I fancy, we've got fixed up already. By the way, I suppose you are sure that your explosion in the forehold won't be too big. If would be an awkward job for us if the old ship's bottom was really blown out in sober earnest."

"We have got ourselves out altogether, and the young moon was sailing him amid scurrying cloudbanks. In the white and shifting light Patrick Cambel's face looked pale and anxious.

"You're sure," Kettle repeated, "it won't be a case of the engineer being hoisted by his own thingammy?"

"No, I'm not sure, and that's what bothers me. You see, one couldn't quite get an expert to measure out the precise necessary dose, and I've had to guess at it. I daren't undercharge my bomb. If our explosion was a fizzle, and the crew didn't get scared and run why then they'd take her up to New Orleans whether we liked it or not, and she'd be examined. Then that intake valve couldn't be missed, and it couldn't be explained away. Man, as you know, the thing's as big as a sluice gate!"

"All the bilge pumps in the Gulf of Mexico couldn't make headway against that valve once it was fairly opened. It's the quickest and cleverest way of scuttling a steamboat I ever heard of or read about. But I don't quite see how the valve is going to be forced."

"You leave that to me."

"You seem used to the game," said Kettle, with a half sneer.

Cambel Makes Retort

"No, I'm not," returned the other quickly. "I've never had my fingers in anything so ugly or dirty before, and because I don't want to have the experience ever again I'm going to make this turn to a big profit or get killed in the trying. I'm tired and sick of the wild, hankering life. A woman drove me to it, but I believe if I had the means to settle down in comfort now I could forget all about her and wake up other new interests."

"Well," said Kettle, "I hope we may each of us buy a farm out of this racket, but I tell you straight I'm not over sweet on the chances. To begin with you, and I can't handle this steamboat alone. It's an absolute certainty that we must have another hand to help us out. You'll have to take the wheel and pilot her through if you can, though that's a mighty big job for one man, and the odds are about ten to one you'll pile her up somewhere. I've got to be below. At a pinch I might drive the engines, though I don't know much about the trade, but I can't do that and fire two six-hole boilers and wheel coal out of the bunkers as well. Now, I think the donkeyman is the chap we want. He understands his way about down there, he's as strong as a winch, and I fancy he knows which side of his biscuit is buttered."

"Yes, I'm with you there. We'll have the donkeyman if he'll come."

"Then why not sound him now?"

"Because I'll hint of this infernal scheme to no one till it's fairly ablaze. Man, if a ghost's whisper of it got about the crew would rise and grab us, pistols or no pistols. They'd have that amount of scare in them, they'd walk straight up to a Maxim and they'd trample us out of existence before we could fairly look round. No, my neck itches enough as things are at present, and if another man on board now besides you knew what was going to be done tonight I should feel a bowline noose inside my collar, with half a dozen hangmen beginning to tug at it."

"See here, Mr. Cambel," said the shipmaster, "are you getting sorry you came out on this trip?"

The other laughed harshly. "Sorry!" Whatever have you got in your head now? If I'd a fair chance I'd start it with open eyes, and I make a point of never indulging in useless regrets afterward. No, Captain Kettle, I'm going through with this matter, whether it succeeds or fails, whether it is begun about without injury to a single human soul or whether it costs the last pint of breath from every man in this ship. If I can, to you I am nervous. The only things which we are sure can happen are the unexpected, and we can't prepare for those, and the preparation may ruin us."

Consider the Donkeyman

"It's a big gamble," assented Kettle. "And I wish I could say, 'May the Lord defend the right.' But I can't, and you can't, and least of all Shelf can't. It's a devil's job, anyway, and he don't always stand by his men. I don't much care what happens. You go below to your room now, and get a call of sleep. You'll want it. And, first, if you please, I'll shake hands with you. We've never done it before because a nod's been enough other times, but this is different. You're a decentish sort and I fancy if that woman hadn't meedled you wouldn't have been shipmates here with me tonight."

They exchanged a quick handgrip, each looking rather ashamed of himself, and then Cambel went down the bridge ladder whistling and Owen Kettle rested himself in his camp stool. When next they met the tragedy of the Port Edes would have begun. And in which, perhaps, both would die by any out of ten violent deaths.

A Dereliction

EIGHT bells—midnight.

The outlook in the crews' nest forward chanted his last melancholy "All's well" and gave way to the relief of the next watch. He climbed down by the cleats to the iron mast and went to the starboard door in the forecastle. Other men, followed him, jumping like cats along the streaming decks and others came a little later, dingy fellows, with neck clouts like dish cloths, who went in at the port door, these last being the goats of shipboard—the fireman and the trimmers—who were divided off from the more high caste deck hands by a fore and aft bulkhead.

The third mate and the quartermaster, too, from the upper bridge were replaced by another quartermaster and another mate. And they all went to the places appointed to them, and the snores of their breathing soon rattled against the bunk combings. Only two men on the Port Edes who were not on the roster of duty stood the windy morning's first watch. Under the lee of the canvas shelter Captain Kettle sat huddled on his camp stool in a style which to man could distinguish with certainty between wakefulness and sleep, and below in his room, which opened off the main cabin, and was next to the specie room, Patrick Cambel was dabbling in something which the laws of the nations would stigmatize as felony and that of complex degree.

Cambel Gets Ready

There were two berths in the room, the upper one against the window port, which he slept in and the lower, which contained two spread out portmanteaus. Beneath this last were drawers in which the cabin rooms sported in harbor, and other articles of ship use. Cambel had two of these drawers out on the floor, and from the recess of their sits had drawn two fine green silk covered ulsters.

He disentangled the coils, taking care to avoid the kinks, and then unscrewed the cover from the top and removed the room's tric lamp. Beneath were certain pieces of metal imbedded in vulcanite.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

THEY ARE RIGHT

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a country girl who is staying in the city during the Winter to go to school. I met during the first part of the year a young man who loves me and whom I love, but when I wrote to my parents of our engagement they objected to him as to his habits and found out that he smoked a few cheap cigarettes. Now, my folks are very much opposed to cigarettes and have forbidden me to have anything more to do with him.

ELAINE.

A MAN who smokes a great many cigarettes may have some good qualities, but the odds are all against it. Obey your parents; they are right.

HIS LOVE IS COOLING

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been going with a gentleman for the past four months who is one year my senior. He has my photo and will not return it. How can I get the same returned? I have written him several letters and have not received an answer to them. Is it for the reason he does not care for me, or what is the reason?

HEART BROKEN.

UNLESS you have the assistance of a father or a brother you cannot enforce your demand for your photograph. I am sorry you gave it to him, but since you have done so, waste time to regret, as both him and the matter drop. You only strengthen his conviction that you care for him by writing him.

CASSIDY DISCUSSES MILK CONFERENCE; WHAT MYRON PIERCE SAYS

The conference was called in the endeavor to frame new pure milk laws for the different States. Myron E. Pierce, counsel for the Massachusetts Milk Consumers' Association, the chief backers of the so-called Ellis Milk bill, criticises the proceedings very severely in an interview with Mr. Cassidy.

HARRY P. CASSIDY.

The recent pure milk conference held in New York, when delegates were summoned from the different New England States, and when Dr. Charles E. North, an eminent New York sanitation expert, presided, is of interest in this year of pure food measures. Its proceedings should be of value to everyone who is interested, pro or con, to the question of pure milk.

I doubt if anyone would admit he favored allowing anything but the highest standard of milk purity. But there have been many different measures presented in the present State Legislature, designed to secure this purity.

I attended hearings on these measures. One provides for a State milk regulation board, to make rules which shall be enforced by the State Board of Health. This bill is objected to by the inspectors in cities and towns throughout the State on the ground that it puts the continuance of their work in the discretion of the State Board and cuts their available power.

Myron E. Pierce is the chief representative of the backers of this bill. This is the so-called Ellis milk bill. As he represents one side, and the conference another, it is interesting to hear what he had to say of the deliberations of the latter body.

The Massachusetts delegates to this conference, by the way, included Dr. Richardson of the State Board of Health, P. H. Harwood of the State Dairy Bureau. They were appointed by Governor Foss.

Conference a Failure.

Mr. Pierce said:

The Milk Inspection Conference was a decided failure from the public health point of view, and its conclusions should have very little weight.

I understand that the New York Milk Committee will present their original bill to the Legislature without taking into consideration the results of the conference on the disputed points. I am also told that Governor Sulzer's health representative at the conference is framing a bill of his own.

Of the eighteen entitled to vote on the important motions, only five could be considered health officials or experts. The rest were officials of boards of agriculture or persons of allied interests. As every official thinks his department is the most important of all and that he should be increased indefinitely, naturally the conference voted in favor of the board of agriculture as the supporting authority.

"Dr. John F. Anderson of the Public Health Service of the United States government, undoubtedly the foremost health expert present, on several occasions stated that the conference was losing sight of its object, which was to devise means for protecting the public health. His word of warning, however, was not heeded, and the keynote of the proceedings was struck by P. H. Harwood of our State Dairy Bureau, who stated that milk inspection was primarily an economic question, disregarding the finding of his own bureau, which was that milk inspection is primarily a health matter.

Denied Right to Vote.

"Dr. E. J. Lederle, the Health Commissioner of New York, a warm friend of milk inspection is a most notable one, did not attend the conference because he would not be permitted to vote if present. Dr. Lederle, the fellow-ney of the Boston Board of Health was permitted to speak, but was not permitted to vote. The consumers, who are really more interested than anyone else, were given no right to vote. I was told that I might ask questions, but could not speak or vote. No attempt was made to bring forward the Ellis bill and it was mentioned only once, incidentally by Dr. Richardson.

"I may say that the array of experts of national reputation who have been consulted in regard to the Ellis Bill and who have approved its provisions would make a really formidable showing. They would include Mr. M. N. Baker, the editor of the Engineering News; Dr. C. H. Wells, of the Montvale Board of Health; Dr. William Bryan Stokes, of the Maryland Department of Health; Professor H. W. Conn, of the Connecticut Board of Health; Dr. Ernest J. Lederle; Dr. Marxen P. Ravenel of the Wisconsin State Hygienic Laboratory, University Milk Specialist; Dr. Henry C. Sherman, of Columbia University; Lewis Pinckney Smith and Professor Milton J. Rosenau, who are among the leading experts of the world on the subject."

Cuts Local Revenues.

That is Mr. Pierce's view of the conference, so far as it was concerned with milk questions. The conference's views, I believe, were opposed to the principal of a new State Board to pass milk regulations. In this connection it is interesting to see the comment made upon the Ellis bill by the legislative committee of the Massachusetts Association of Boards of Health, which also recently reported to the association. This report says:

"House 2056—This is the Ellis bill of past years. This year introduced by Richard M. Hoadley. While it appears to deprive local boards of health of revenue now received from milk licenses, the main objection to the bill lies in Section 2, wherein the participation of local boards in the carrying out of the provisions of the bill is left entirely to the discretion of the State Board of Health. Milk would be determined by statute, and inadequately, and not left to a body whose personnel may within a year or two be completely changed."

The question of how milk laws shall be enforced is a tremendous one. In this connection, the vital facts are to my mind the following:

Boston's own milk supply is now said by experts to be excellent.

In outlying districts, however, there is often no inspection, whatever, of dairy establishments, because the local authorities do not take the trouble to require it.

There is, at present, no effective way so far as I have been able to discover to bar unclean milk from the state-wide market, if it comes from dairies outside the State, and a large proportion of the milk now does come.

The inspection is now largely in the hands of the local authorities. Any given locality has power to efficiently protect its own supply from unclean milk. The Ellis bill purports to establish a means of regulating out-State dairies. It also purports to establish a State-wide inspection system. Its opponents, however, are opposed to deny both these advantages.

The primary consideration is clean milk. The best way to secure clean milk is by education of consumers, producers and middlemen. Any bill that will serve these ends has the support of friends of pure milk.

A Disease That Develops Unsuspected

Many People Are Afflicted With Kidney Disease Before They Have Any Idea Anything Is Wrong.

No wonder doctors consider kidney disease one to be most dreaded. It most often attacks without any particular previous warning. This puts a watchful care of the kidneys right up to every individual.

Dr. Loomis, the great specialist on kidney diseases, says: "There is not one person in twenty-five at 40 years of age who has healthy kidneys." This information gives one a shock. Who can claim himself to be one of the lucky four in every hundred?

This condition imposes upon every one the necessity for occasional self-examination—say every two or three months. Thousands, of course, must have kidney trouble right now without knowing it. You should make a test and if you find your kidneys are diseased there is not a moment to lose. You should begin at once to take Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy, with a reputation of thirty-five years in the successful treatment of Kidney, Liver and Bladder troubles.

All leading druggists sell Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy as well as all the other well-known Warner Remedies—the Diabetes Remedy, the Nervine, the Rheumatism Remedy, Asthma Remedy, and the Safe Pills. "CASCARETS" FOR SICK HEADACHE

Billous, throbbing headache means bowels are clogged and liver stagnant.

You're billous, you have a throbbing sensation in your head, a bad taste in your mouth, your eyes burn, your skin is yellow, with dark rings under your eyes; your lips are parched. No wonder you feel ugly, mean and ill-tempered. Your system is full of bile not properly passed off, and what you need is a cleaning up inside. Don't continue being a billous nuisance to yourself and those who love you, and don't resort to harsh physics that irritate and injure. Remember, that most disorders of the stomach, liver and intestines can be quickly cured by morning with gentle, thorough Cascarets—they work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from your druggist will keep your liver and bowels clean; stomach sweet and your head clear for months. Children love to take Cascarets, because they taste good and never grips or sicken.

VENUS EDITOR HAS BIG TASK TO PICK WOMEN

Ernest L. Major, the eminent artist, says that the beauty of the most famous sculptures and paintings, the Venus de Milo, the Hermes of Praxiteles and the Nike of Samothrace, emanated entirely from the mind of the artist. All of which goes to make the AMERICAN Venus contest more complicated. If Praxiteles and others, for instance, had marked his statue of Hermes, "aged thirty at the most beautiful period of her life," we would then have something to base a conclusion on.

In the absence of any statistics the Venus editor is obliged to delve deeper into the question than the mere recording of measurements. These are, of course, necessary, but of equal value will be the statements from the contestants about their methods of life. How did you obtain your perfect proportions? Tell it in your letter. What sort of food do you eat; what do you drink; what are your habits, occupation, state of mind? Do you repose while reading? How long do you sleep? Do you take an afternoon nap? These are all important and will have a bearing on the contest.

Letters from competitors continue to pour in. One was received from Mrs. Christine Hancock of East Boston, whose picture is published today. She lives at No. 145 Lexington street. Her measurements are:

DON'T PENSION WIDOWS, SAYS MRS. TILTON

by SYBIL WARNE.

Shall the State pension widows?

Mrs. Elizabeth Tilton of No. 123 Pinckney street, president of the Widow's Society, does not agree with Mayor Fitzgerald about widows' pensions. She encloses every type of help to be rendered widows, but would do nothing for them that would humiliate them.

Her own practical work along the line of helping widows has been to take widows with their children out into the country to live, and give them an opportunity to work several days every week, so that they will feel partly independent.

In all such plans she urges, when possible, rent free for widows, three times every month, so that they have the independent until the children grow up to take care of themselves.

As a commission is soon to report upon this subject, she thinks that this will throw some light upon the whole subject.

Teach Independence.

Mrs. Tilton said:

Many of us have been doing for some time work for widows and their children in country towns. While I am not prepared as an expert on this subject, as Mr. Carstens of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children is, I am well aware that something can be done.

With the help of others I took two widows with eleven children from the city into a country town.

We gave them work for two days every week. On the other days of the week they are being supported by the Associated Charities and Overseers of the Poor.

My one plan is this: I wanted these widows to feel somewhat independent. By working two days a week they are partly so, and they get more or less acquainted with the people in the country town where they are living.

They go out washing. They clean windows, scrub paint, or if they do not feel able to do this kind of work there is always something that they can find to do. People, you know, want somebody to come into their house at times and do some extra work. Well, these widows are doing it in the country town. They would not get the same opportunity in the city.

Try Country Life.

Now there are many country towns near Boston that would be very glad to get the help of widows in household duties.

We ought to get the widows work that will make them feel independent to some extent.

Widows have pride like other people. While they might like a State pension, yet many would spend being pointed out as receiving State aid.

If we could get more widows with their children into the country towns, I believe that we could make life more happy for them as well as for their children.

I am not opposed to widows' pensions, but in Massachusetts our charitable work is so well organized that I feel that we have few widows neglected. Those who are neglected could easily be helped.

Then in Massachusetts we have so many orphan asylums where half orphans are taken. Many a widow has placed her children in these homes and had the children well cared for.

There are many such places in Massachusetts, where widows can have their children taken care of until such times when the children are able to take care of themselves.

Mayor Fitzgerald Says:

"I am in favor of the universal pensioning of all widows with children."

WHAT DO YOU THINK?

LAWYER MUCCI OF BOSTON IS BARRED

HACKENSACK, N. J., Feb. 11.—Leon Mucci, a Boston lawyer, one of the attorneys for the defence at the trial of Editor and Giovannitti, the labor leaders, at Lawrence, Mass., was not recognized as counsel by Justice Parker in the Supreme Court today when ten Italians were placed on trial under indictment for murder. The reason for the court's action was the appearances in an Italian newspaper of a first page three column article, signed Leon Mucci, denouncing the prosecution.

SICILIAN IS DISABLED IN A HURRICANE

The Allan liner Sicilian arrived in port today from Glasgow, Scotland, one week late. Her decks were covered to a depth of six inches with ice.

The Sicilian had twenty-six cabin and twenty-two steerage passengers. January 27 the liner encountered a hurricane. On the 31st all the port holes, which light the quarters of the firemen, were broken by floating ice, thrown in by the storm. Water came in and the firemen had to bunk in the forecastle until the carpenters succeeded in repairing the port holes.

GOTCH COMING HERE TO WATCH RIVALS ON MAT

Frank Gotch, world's champion wrestler, who recently announced that he would return to the mat if given his price—which he stipulated as $20,000—is on his way to Boston, according to a Chicago rumor. It is said that Gotch declared his visit to the Hub was simply a social one, but it is thought that the real purpose of his quick jump to this city was to see the Zbyszko-Lemle match, which will be held at the Mechanics building tomorrow night.

As these two men will undoubtedly be among the four who will challenge the champion for his title, it is thought that Gotch's plan was to see the pair in action and pick up some of the finer points connected with the style of wrestling of the two men.

He has never seen Lemle wrestle in a big match, but thinks highly of the young star.

It is thought that while here Gotch will get in touch with Promoter George Tuohey to talk over the prospects of future matches and possible opponents to meet him in a title bout.

When Gotch made the statement that he would return to the mat, he evidently thought that he would wrestle only in Chicago, despite the fact that the Boston promoter has been after his services for months.

Shortly after his announcement Mayor Carter Harrison put the ban on wrestling in Chicago. Gotch, however, will hold to his word, and as no other city outside of Boston or Chicago could pay him his price he will undoubtedly accept the Boston invitation.

HARVARD MAY MAKE HOCKEY MAJOR SPORT

The question of making hockey a major sport at Harvard will probably be urged at the next University Forum, which will be held in the union next Tuesday night. Harry Gardner, captain and goal of the varsity team, is expected to speak in favor of the idea. Last year the question came up before the student council and was only defeated by a small margin.

PIRATES SIGN CATCHER.

PITTSFIELD, Feb. 11.—Larry Reynolds, a former West Point catcher, who caught Pitchers Hyatt and Devore, has signed to play with Pittsfield. Kevin Manion of New Brunswick, N. J., has sent his contract for a tryout as shortstop. Manager Zeller will have a big squad to pick from, possibly twenty-five men reporting for positions at spring practice.

AMATEUR RULERS PROBE 'HOLDUPS' OF GOTHAM CLUB

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—Athletic followers were today stirred by the report that certain prominent athletes tried to "holdup" the New York A. C., which is to hold a series of track games tomorrow night. The charges were made in the "Winged Foot," the official organ of the New York A. C., and they were investigated by the Metropolitan Association.

The first intimation the registration committee had in the matter was when the "Winged Foot" was issued, and when Chairman J. W. Stumpf read the statement he said that the committee would take immediate steps to get at the bottom of the affair, which not only accused some of the local star athletes, but also criticised the apathy of the A. A. U. in dealing with the evil of amateurs demanding appearance money before they would compete in open games.

Mr. Stumpf said that he would write to the New York A. C. for a copy of the paper, and on receiving it would ask the officials of the club responsible for the article to appear before the committee and tell what grounds they had for making the charges.

SPORTS OF ALL SORTS

By RILEY

IN an effort to uncover their intentions, Jimmy McAleer has announced that he will send none of his pitchers or catchers to Hot Springs until they have sent him their signed contracts for this year. He thus "calls" O'Brien, Hall and Collins—three of his five star pitchers—and Carrigan and Nunamaker—two of his four regular catchers. While none of these has been considered a "holdout," none of them has yet signed up following letters sent to them by McAleer, so that they are fast approaching the "holdout" stage, whether they so intend or not.

* * *

MCALEER has been secretive in his negotiations with the men who have not yet signed. He says he confidently believes that they will all affix their John Hancocks before April 10, when the bell rings. But they have not yet signed. So McAleer has a good-sized "revolt" on his hands—if you want to call a wholesale disposition to "stall" over salary figures by such a harsh name.

* * *

BESIDES the greater part of his battery strength, McAleer has not reached terms with his outfield—Hooper, Speaker and Lewis. He has signed his infield intact—Stahl, Yerkes, Wagner and Gardner—and the most of his substitutes. None of them had any good reason to "hold out." Stahl has a standing contract; Yerkes had held an insecure position; Wagner was close to the limit of a veteran shortstop of his standing, and Gardner wanted a three years' agreement, which he received in a moment. All of them are well paid men, for the positions they hold and the standing they have in the big leagues.

* * *

BUT it is different with the batterles and the outfielders. The pitchers are not paid the salaries supposed to be given to star flingers on world's championship teams. All of the "holdout" quartet want substantially more money than they received last year. In the case of Bedient, he was given a big boost over last year's figure, so he signed. Bedient was serving his first regular year in 1912 and worked for not much more than the regular "rookie" pay, so he could have a big boost without necessarily getting into the headline salary class.

* * *

THE outfield trio is paid about $12,000, which is $3,000 less for the whole three than Ty Cobb alone is supposed to have "held out" for. Hooper, Speaker and Lewis would like to be paid star salaries in keeping with their position as outer gardeners for the champions of the world.

* * *

WITH the batteries, McAleer has told Stahl that he will not have the men at Hot Springs at the expense of the club unless they have signed, by which decree he has forced the issue. Either they must sign up before the end of the month, according to McAleer, or they will have to pay their own fares and their own expenses at the Springs.

* * *

BUT nobody ever heard of a world's champion remaining on the outside looking in when business started.

* * *

JAKE STAHL expects to be at Hot Springs in less than two weeks, and he hopes to have his battery staff—McAleer's dictum regardless—at work by March 1, which is less than three weeks from now. And he believes that they will be well limbered up by the time the regular squad reports at the Springs on March 7.

BILLY QUEAL HOPES TO BEAT FINN IN 15-MILE CONTEST

Willie Kolehmainen, the world's long distance running champion, and Billy Queal, the American champion, have ditched their hard training for the big fifteen-mile race that will be held in conjunction with the Jim Thorpe all-around competition at Mechanics Building Saturday night. The little Finnish champion has been training daily in New York with his brother, Hannes, the Olympic champion who recently established a new American five-mile record, and the older Kolehmainen is just as confident that he will establish a new fifteen-mile mark in his race against the American champion.

Queal, the sturdy little American, is coaching the Yale long distance runners, and he claims to be in the best form of his career. He has been training daily with the Yale runners and no less a judge than Johnny Mack says that Queal will easily beat the Finn.

H. A. BARWISE

HARRY A. BARWISE, who is now wearing the colors of the Boston Athletic Association, has to be reckoned with as one of the best high jumpers in the country. His rise to fame has been rapid, as a short while ago he was comparatively an unknown quantity, although he had competed for three years.

Barwise, who hails from Malden, is well known in that city, having been a member of the Malden Y. M. C. A. for several years, competing in the meets held by that association.

Barwise, who is six feet in height, is slight in build. His appearance does not suggest any of his wonderful athletic ability. The first victory of note that the former Malden jumper won was the junior national indoor high jump championship, when he cleared six feet and defeated the favorite Moffat of Harvard. He is now jumping as high as any athlete in the country, having cleared six feet one inch at the recent B. A. A. games.

PIPE DREAMS

By GEORGE E. PHAIR

THE COMEBACK.

The noble red man, free and wild,
Was simple as a little child.
He hunted on the prairie wide
And skinned the bison of his hide.
He was not educated then
To skin his trusting fellow men.

And then the noble white man came,
Improved upon the skinning game,
And skinned the red man of his hide,
His wealth, his land, and more beside,
Horswoggled him for every bean
And left the noble red man clean.

The red man now has learned the game,
And lustily he plays the same.
He lingers on the baseball field
And makes the baseball magnate yield
Six thousand bones in real dough
Which same is going some, I trow.

Even if Jim Thorpe fails to make good, he will always feel like a regular big leaguer on payday.

No, Rolfe, the Jeffries who attached Lute McCarty's belt is not James J. Jeffries. James accumulated enough belts in Reno to satisfy him for approximately 5,000 years.

Whatever may be said of Knock-em-out Brown, he never can be accused of attacking a defenseless typewriter.

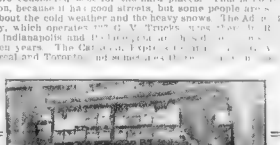
104 G. V. Electric Trucks
For American Express Company

AGAIN the product of the General Vehicle Company, Incorporated, wins very high honors. The American Express Company has released 25 of these trucks for the performance of the duties of the collection and delivery offices of the company in Boston, Mass.

It's a good deal to be used by the express companies are considered best for the hard places. This is true on Boston, because it has good streets, but some people are pessimistic about the cold weather and the heavy snows. The American Express Company, which operates 104 G. V. Trucks, has seven offices in Buffalo, Indianapolis and Pittsburgh as well as seven offices in Montreal and Toronto, and some of these



The merchants of New England will eventually find that motor trucks, and especially G. V. Electric Trucks, are the money-savers when compared with horses for city work. G. V. Trucks were never so efficient—never gave so much mileage—never cost so little to maintain as right now. With 957 used by 25 firms alone, some of them having now Electrics for 10 years, how can anyone say, consistently, "The Electric is a nice, clean, quiet machine, but I'll wait until it is perfected."

I TELL YOU 'MINARE,' I HAD ONE PERFECTLY HAPPY LITTLE OLD CHILDHOOD DAYS, I DID. I REMEMBER WELL, HOW ALL THE PRETTY LADIES WOULD STROKE MY CURLY, GOLDEN LOCKS, AND SIGH WITH ENVY AT THEIR BEAUTY. WHY THE CURLS OF A SHARKLEY CUPID WOULD LOOK LIKE A MESS OF EXCELSIOR NEXT TO THIS REGENERATED BLOND, AND FLEXUOUS FILIFORMITY OF THE HAIR THAT ONCE VEGETATED ON MY BEAN
IT LOOKS LIKE A LETTER FROM YOUR MOTHER, MY OWN.
WELL, THAT'S NICE. WONDER WHAT SHE HAS TO SAY? HURRY, AND OPEN IT.
U.S. MAIL
IT IS FROM YOUR MOTHER, AND LOOK AT THE FUNNY LITTLE BUNDLE OF BLACK BRISTLES SHE SENDS. I'LL READ THE LETTER AND SEE WHAT SHE MEANS BY SENDING THEM
WE'LL BE GENEROUS, AND LET YOU READ IT TOO —
DEAR MINARE.
WHILE GOING OVER AN OLD TRUNK IN THE GARRET TO-DAY I FOUND A FEW LOCKS OF DRAINISS' HAIR, I HAD SAVED EVER SINCE HE WAS A MERE CHILD. IT ISN'T FIRST-CLASS HAIR, AS YOU CAN SEE, AND IT'S A KIND OF A SUNDRY HUE, AND QUITE RIGID, AND STIFF, ONCE, HE HAD ONE WHICH WAS ALMOST CURLY BUT HE LOST IT ON HIS WAY TO SCHOOL ONE DAY, AND IT WAS NEVER RECOVERED. AT ANOTHER TIME, DUE THREATENED TO BECOME CURLY, BUT HE SPOILED IT BY NEGLIGENTLY LETTING THE RAIN FALL ON IT

HOUSE NAVAL COMMITTEE FOR 2 BATTLESHIPS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11. The House Committee on Naval Affairs voted today to authorize two new battleships in the naval appropriation bill to be reported later.

The committee endeavored to keep its votes secret until the bill is reported, but it leaked from the committee room that a sufficient number of Democrats had joined with the Republicans to bring out a two battleship bill.

The vote for two battleships is practically a compromise between the recommendation of the Secretary of the Navy for three ships and the demand of the small navy men of the House for not more than one.

RESOLVE ON HOME RULE IN HOUSE TODAY

A congratulatory resolution addressed to Premier Asquith of England, Augustine Birrell, Chief Secretary of Ireland, and John Redmond, the Irish leader, will come up in the House today for adoption.

The resolution was introduced by Representative Channing Cox of Boston, following the visit of a delegation from the United Irish League, consisting of John O'Callaghan, Michael J. Jordan and Michael Maynes.

The resolution reads:

Whereas, The people of Ireland, after a long and bitter struggle which has enlisted the sympathy of all lovers of freedom throughout the world, have at last secured the adoption by the House of Commons of a Home Rule bill for Ireland; and

Whereas, The bill was passed by a majority which appears to insure the final success of the measure; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts congratulates not only the people of Ireland, but the people of Great Britain upon the passage through the Commons of the Home Rule bill for Ireland; and

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Commonwealth be requested to forward a copy of these resolutions to the Honorable Henry A. Asquith, Prime minister; to the Honorable John E. Redmond, leader of the Irish people, and to the Honorable Augustine Birrell, Home Secretary for Ireland.

ASKS HARVARD MEN TO END SMOKING IN DORMITORY ROOMS

There are perhaps ninety per cent. of the Harvard students who smoke. It is argued that this costs an average of 50¢ a day. The average of 10 cents per man, which is considered low, has been taken as a basis for this.

Within the last two years four fires have taken place in Harvard rooms from students who smoked in bed or were careless about their cigar ashes. These have amounted in damages to about $5,000 more. According to the yard authorities, and in a few of the Gold Coast dormitories, pledges have been circulated asking all men to refrain from smoking except in certain rooms.

SHEARN DECLINES SUPREME JUDGESHIP

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 11.—It was learned here today that the name which had been sent to Governor Sulzer to New York was an attempt to secure a man to succeed Edward E. McCall on the Supreme Court bench. McCall resigned to accept the chairmanship of the Public Service Commission. The position of Supreme Court Justice was offered to Clarence J. Shearn, who is legal counsel for the Hearst New York American, but Mr. Shearn declined to accept.

Stock Prices; Financial News

There was no improvement in stock matters in early trading today, all being dull and most of them lower. In Boston the first hour business was chiefly in telephone rights. Copper was weaker. This was credited to the decline in the London G. M. H. market. Granby went down more than a point, and Lake was weak. At the end of the first hour Quincy was up 4 points. By that time in New York American Can had declined 1¼.

Kidder, Peabody & Co. have reduced sterling rates ¼ cent all around.

New York Opens Lower.

Prices were lower when New York trading began, all the standard leaders showing fractional losses. American Can sold up to 42, but its leadership is not accepted. Bears thought that news favored their side and did not hesitate hammering. There was very little demand for stocks and any selling caused declines. Almost every issue tended to suffered price shading. Some traders thought the Mexican situation is very important in a market sense, and there was much discussion of intervention possibilities.

London cablegrams say that in the general currency in that market the tone was steady in the main. American stocks were not regarded in a cheerful spirit. Steel was heavy because of the decrease in its unfilled tonnage. Canadian Pacific lacked support.

In New York, after American Can climbed a little, it was subjected to pressure and declined 8/8. A similar loss occurred in Southern Pacific. Other heavy features were the bonding St. Paul, California Petroleum, Reading, Union Pacific, Amalgamated, Canadian Pacific, Steel common and Woolworth common.

Cold Storage in Portland.

Portland, Me., is to have a cold storage warehouse with 400,000 cubic feet capacity, which will be built by the New England Cold Storage Company, a Massachusetts corporation, for which Morton E. Cobb is local agent, and it appears to have the guaranty of big business from Maine and elsewhere. The corporation has bought the entire capital stock of the Portland Cold Storage Company and starts with the business of the latter and more in sight. A refrigerating pipe line 1,500 feet long has been installed to connect the power house of the new plant with the one acquired. The new company has also obtained control of the facilities which the Board of Trade, railroads, merchants and manufacturers have called for. That action alone interest.

As issue of $300,000 7 per cent. cumulative preferred stock at a par value of $100 a share, tax exempt in Massachusetts, is to provide funds for building equipment and financing. It is said on behalf of the company. "The net estimated earnings for the first year will double the dividend requirements. Tentative contracts for a large portion of the business have already been signed."

Copper Gyrates in London.

Bears were busy in the London warrants market and at the opening spot copper was off £2. 0s. and futures dropped 15s. This slump followed the report that yesterday there was some domestic buying of the metal on this side of the Atlantic. American consumers are said to have taken late quantities of scrip-like at prices ranging from 15¾ to 16 cents a pound for March and April delivery. There was also some business in the way of April exporting.

A reliable publication says: "Confirmation of what had been generally belief in the trade regarding unsold copper stocks came to hand yesterday in the quarterly report of the Nevada Consolidated Copper Company, whose product is sold through the American Smelting & Refining Company. The report stated that considerable unsold metal had been brought forward into the new year, some of which had since been sold. On January 1 there was in stock at refineries in the United States 105,000,000 pounds, a large part of which had not been marketed.

"A decrease of 3½ per cent. in production by some of the largest copper mines of the country has been reported for the month of January. These mines turned out 66,610,000 pounds, against 62,835,000 pounds a year ago."

Financial News in Brief.

International Harvester has changed its name as well as reduced capitalization. It is officially known now as the International Harvester Co. of New Jersey.

The diminution of share transactions on the New York Stock Exchange is attributed not only to doubt on the part of the public but to enforcement of the new rule for the abatement of manipulation. "It has checked," says one commentator, "some heinous manipulations that often engaged in by pools or individuals interested in a particular stock. Unfortunately, even when the market for the stock was not at all active, orders for the purchase and sale of a few hundred shares would be transmitted if for no other reason than to keep the stock in the public eye, to have it show in the stock tables in the papers."

The Canadian Pacific directors declared the regular quarterly dividends of 1¾ per cent. out of railway earnings, and ¾ of 1 per cent. out of returns from land sales, on the common stock and the regular semi-annual dividend of 2 per cent. on preferred.

A circular issued by Soldiers, Phillips & Co. gives particulars of the $5,000,000 bond issues of The South Carolina Light, Power and Railways Company, which does all the gas and railway business of Spartanburg, that State, and supplies power and electric light for manufacturing plants in five cities and towns.

The Pennsylvania Railroad system has placed orders for 10,000 freight cars, and the total cost will be $12,444,000.

Sears Roebuck & Co. February sales to date show about 5 per cent. increase, compared with the business of the corresponding period last year.

The New York city-treasury gained $2,292,000 from banks yesterday, and since Friday has gained $4,892,000.

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

There is going to be a great revival of interest in automobile touring competition this year. First of all the Glidden Tour is to be contested again, to run either from New Orleans to Detroit or from New Orleans to New York.

Later will come the Chicago Automobile Club's non-stop run from Chicago to Boston, and on July 1 the tour of the Indiana Automobile Manufacturers' Association will be run from Indianapolis to San Francisco.

There is promise of some sort of a touring contest around New York, to be managed by the newly formed Motor Dealers' Contest Association of New York. Senator Morgan is planning a contest in New Jersey. Although there are a number of big automobile competitions in Boston and New England, they do not seem to do much to promote contests in touring.

E. S. Jordan, secretary of the Thomas B. Jeffery Company, in a letter from Kenosha, Wis., says the world's record for rapid sales of motor cars to individual buyers was again broken by the Rambler people at the thirteenth annual automobile show held at the Chicago Coliseum.

"One hundred and ninety-three cars, or approximately $367,000 worth of automobiles is the record for seven days," states the dispatch from the Rambler factory. "This beats the record established by the same company during the same week one year ago, when 187 cars were sold."

* * *

The next regular meeting of the Electric Motor Car Club of Boston will be held at the Hotel Plaza, Columbus avenue, at 8 P. M., Thursday. The formal reports on the New York and Chicago automobile shows will be given.

* * *

E. A. Clarke, formerly with the Oakland Boston branch and prior to that with the E. R. Thomas Motor Car Company, is now with the Chicago office of the Jackson Motor Car Company, of this city.

* * *

Paul Smith, who until December last was sales manager of the Flanders Motor Company of Detroit, has been appointed sales manager of the Lozier Motor Company of that city. He succeeds C. A. Emlen, who resigned to become a member of the newly organized Chandler Motor Car Company.

U. S. ATTACKS CHICAGO BOARD ON GRAIN PRICE

CHICAGO—A bill attacking the Board of Trade as a price-fixing institution in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law will be filed in Chicago within the next forty-eight hours, according to a report about the Federal Building today, at the order of Attorney-General Wickersham.

The big grain exchange is to be arraigned by the government for fixing what is known as the "call" price of grain each day at the close of trading.

Under a new rule no broker is permitted to deal in grain at any but the "call" price from the closing of the exchange on one day till the opening of the trading the next day.

Only during the three hours of trading is the price subject to natural fluctuations.

The penalty for violation of this rule by any broker is suspension. As a consequence violations are rare.

The government will contend that this naming of a "call" price suppresses natural competition and results in an artificial inflation of the cost of foodstuffs.

POLICEMEN GUARD MEDFORD FACTORY

Fearing trouble from men who, he said, had sent him a number of letters threatening to fix up his factory and force his employes to quit work, C. T. Smith, president of the Franklin Rubber Company, asked for a policemen outside the building No. 929 Eastern avenue, Medford, today, with instructions to drive all suspicious persons. More police were told at the Medford police station. There are 100 men employed in the factory.

AT THE

HENRY F. MILLER
PIANO WAREROOMS

395 BOYLSTON ST.

Bargains in new and used pianos. We believe our marked prices are lower than similar values can be bought for elsewhere. We have no "schemes" or "fairy stories" to sell pianos by—but our responsibility and SERVICE to buyers is not excelled anywhere in the United States.

Remember that in addition to our own Henry F. Miller pianos, we represent other well-known makes. A visit to our warerooms will surprise you with the desirability of these other make pianos which we offer in a PERFECTLY LEGITIMATE way at from $175 to $250, and on easy terms to suit purchasers' needs. Established 1863. Always reliable.

Henry F. Miller & Sons Piano Co.

Boston.....395 Boylston Street
Providence.....Butler's Exchange
Portland.....Baxter's Block
Brockton.....13 Main Street

P. S.—We are unalterably opposed to the misrepresentative methods now being so commonly employed in selling pianos almost everywhere.

JANUARY CLEARANCE SALE OF FINE PIANOS

If you have never attended one of our clearance sales do so this season. The most remarkable Piano Bargains ever offered the public are now on sale. Many pianos taken in exchange, slightly used, but the world's best makes are included in the sale. Many of these pianos are the same grade as those we have been selling for years at $350 to $500. Many make terms to suit purchasers' needs. Many pianos are guaranteed for ten years. Many pianos are sold for less than cost.

The Legislative Representatives of the Progressive Party in This State Have Made a Good Beginning

The legislative representatives of the Progressive party in Massachusetts have made an auspicious beginning of their legislative work.

On Thursday of last week, their Chairman, Arthur D. Hill, appeared before the Legislature and made an able and clear argument in favor of the adoption of some method by which the people can correct the errors of our courts in matters which vitally affect their interest.

The public will readily acknowledge the sincerity and earnestness of the Progressive movement in this State when it considers the program of the legislative committee representing that party on matters of legislation at the State House.

Besides Mr. Hill, there is Professor Louis J. Johnson, of Harvard, Professor Albert Bushnell Hart, the Hon. Joseph Walker, Frederick Fuller, Dr. Walter C. Bailey, Miss Stites, of Simmons College, Miss Mary Hale, John G. Palfrey, Robert A. Dean and Professor Charles Zueblin.

The AMERICAN ventures to assert that a finer group of men and women could not be found for volunteer work in behalf of the community than this group of Progressives. The labor which these workers are doing at the State House is the work which will win its way into the hearts of the people, for it is more than mere lip service.

Campaign promises, the people have had for a hundred years. The spasmodic activity of public men just before an election is counting less and less with a people who are growing wiser and wiser and will not count so much as the evidence of all-the-year-round vigilance and service that the Progressive party, through its legislative committee, proposes to render.

If the Progressive party keeps up the good work which it has begun, it will be a legitimate heir to whatever conditions may favor the cause of progress in this country.

More American Ships—Through Free Tolls

The President of the United Fruit Company—an American concern operating eighty-one ships under the British flag—says he is considering the advisability of transferring his whole fleet to American registry for the sake of securing the advantages that will come to American ships in the coasting trade—through the remission of Panama Canal tolls.

This news item is fairly suggestive of the great expansion of our merchant marine that might follow upon proper and patriotic settlement of the tolls questions.

The expansion will probably be very considerable if Congress merely has good sense and self-respect enough to persist in free tolls for the American coasting trade. It would be much greater if Congress had shown a still higher degree of good sense and self-respect and had declared for free tolls for all American ships—whether engaged in the coasting trade or any other trade.

It is regrettable that Secretary Knox, in his recent note to the British Foreign Office, compromised the advantages of American registry for such ships as those of the United Fruit Company by declaring that free tolls for American coasters would not apply to vessels that should happen to touch at a foreign port—such as Havana or Kingston—enroute from one United States port to another.

This concession is unreasonable and excessive. It ought not to be allowed to stand.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

THE TURKEY TROT

Editor Boston AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—I read with much interest the talk given by Mrs. James J. Storrow on the turkey trot and other dances at the Boston Newsboys' Club.

It is all very well to lecture to newsboys and those of the slums, but it is quite essential that our society folk should set the example and not disregard the aim and purpose for better conditions in the art of dancing, and not, as I have seen them, in cut away open-front dresses, dancing the very dances that Mrs. Storrow condemns, mixing in among the very people whom they would should do different.

Do not feel privileged to do that which you would that others should not do.

... CANAL DISPUTE.

Editor Bo... AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—... have taken great pleasure in reading ... editorials on the Panama Canal ... tion. It is the leading problem of the day and will continue to be such until it is settled. It is a deplorable condition of affairs to have among us a few misguided people known as Anglomaniacs.

They are so full of the spirit of righteousness that they are fearful lest England should be wronged by the American interpretation of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty. Not being a diplomat, I cannot comment on the fine points of the treaty itself. But I feel assured of the fact that Uncle Sam and John Bull will be able to settle the matter through the officials of both countries, whose duties have to do with such cases. In closing I would remind those of us who are suffering from acute Anglomania of England's "long-distance" record in treaty breaking.

As examples of which may be cited: The right of search practiced on the high seas, which led to the war of 1812; the imprisonment of the great Napoleon after he had been offered an asylum in Merrie (?) England, and the treaty of Limerick, broken, as the saying runs, before the ink had time to dry.

The Constitution of United States Is Powerless to Turn Our Country Into a Garden of Eden

Not Until the Constitution Ceases to Be Impersonal and Becomes Every Man's Personal Concern Can We Be Purged of Underworld Scandals

By THOMAS TAPPER

I.

THE old colored gentleman and his wife were sitting on the doorstep, sunning themselves. The cabin was made of logs, the chinks between filled with clay. The chimney stood at one end, rickety and leaning. There was a little corn patch at the side of the cabin. The old couple were probably worth Seven Dollars or so—in things they could sell if they had to cash in; but they looked to be worth One Hundred Thousand Dollars in general contentment.

Near the cabin a hound dog was crouching in the sunshine and yelling as if he owned One Hundred Thousand Dollars' worth of unhappiness.

"What is the matter with the dog, uncle?"

"Oh, nothing. He's jest a low-down, ornery hound dog."

"But, uncle, he must have a misery of some sort, or he wouldn't yell so."

"No, stranger, he ain't got no misery. He's jest naturally indolent."

"He sure looks indolent, uncle. Does he yell like that all the time?"

"No, stranger, jest part of the time."

"Don't you think, uncle, he has a misery, after all?"

"No, suh; you don't appear to understand that hound dog. He ain't got no misery. You see, it's this a-way. He comes out with me and the old woman here, and goes to squat down in the sun. Being jest a fool hound dog, he goes and lays himself in a bed of stinging nettles. And they is a-hurting of him some. But he's naturally too lazy to get up, so he yells because they keep on a-pestering him."

"How long will he keep it up, uncle?"

"Till we-uns call him in for supper. Hey, Mandy?"

"Uh, uh," said the old lady, "that's right."

II.

The only place that seems to have been constructed in a satisfactory manner from the beginning was the Garden of Eden. But the population of that delectable spot, failing to obey the ordinances, lost the privilege of roaming in its sunlight glades. From the moment the gates closed upon them, down to the present day, we have had to get things by the sweat of the brow (not counting a few who get it by the sweat of some other man's brow).

The Constitution of the United States and the Statute Laws are powerless to turn our glorious country into a Garden of Eden. Even if this power were invested in them, somebody would be-devil the situation and we should be turned out.

Constitution and laws are not impersonal things. It is because so many of us think they apply to the other man and not to us that our Garden of Eden is so mussed up.

If we had enough sense (not a few of us, but every one of us) to know that citizenship and prosperity are not only worth having, but are worth all the sweat of the brow they cost, then one party would not need to curse the other for our misfortunes.

No President, in his inauguration speech, has ever had the nerve to promise all citizens a pass-book to the savings bank. But this country of ours offers every man an opportunity to own a savings bankbook if he wants it. A few of us, however, do not want it as much as we want some other things.

The Constitution, the Statute Laws, and the President have no power to make a man choose between saving his money and giving it to the barkeeper. They have no power to make a man choose to earn his living by useful labor as against taking a handful of dirty greenbacks for shooting four or five holes into another man.

It is not until the Constitution and the Law cease to be impersonal and become EVERY MAN'S PERSONAL CONCERN that great cities will be purged of underworld scandals. For these underworld scandals sometimes thrust themselves up into other worlds and make us take notice.

III.

"What's the matter with the average citizen, uncle?"

"Oh, nothing; he's jest naturally lazy."

"But, uncle, he has some sort of a misery, hasn't he?"

"No, stranger, he ain't got no misery."

"But what has happened to him, uncle? He seems to be yelling as if he had a real misery."

"No, suh; he ain't got no misery. He's jest a-crouching in a bed of stinging nettles, and he's that lazy he won't get up. He jest yells because they keep a-pestering him."

"Well, uncle, DID YOU EVER THINK OF PULLING UP THE STINGING NETTLES?"

"Who, me?"

"Uh, uh," said the old lady; "that's all right, he means you."

Women Who Have Erred—They Should Forget the Past by Practicing Philanthropy and Benevolence

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1913, by American-Journal-Examiner

"WHAT," asks a young woman of twenty-five, "is the future of a girl of my age who has allowed her affection for a man, and her belief in him, to lead her away from the path of prudence and purity, and who now finds the man about to marry another girl?

"Can the one who is abandoned and deserted hope for any happiness or success in life?

"Can she hope to be forgiven sufficiently to ever take her place again among good men and women?

"Can she do as the man is doing, marry another without telling of her error?"

Yet not quite so much of a problem as in olden times.

The two standards of morals are less marked than they were even a score of years ago.

There are more avenues open for a woman to find employment, occupation and growth than there used to be, and there is a broader sentiment prevalent in the world regarding the woman who has erred, and who earnestly strives to get back into the right paths.

A Woman Who Has Erred Should Forget Through Work and Study

Such a woman (who has no unfortunate evidence of her mistake to confront her hourly) should endeavor to occupy her mind as wholly as possible with work, study, benevolent and philanthropic duties and efforts at self-development and forgetfulness of the past.

She should think of those things which build and construct the moral nature, and obliterate to such a degree as is possible unhappy and depressing memories.

Nature, as well as society, has made its different laws for men and women in matters of morals.

A man easily forgets his lapses from virtue; they slip away, perhaps no farther than the subconscious mind, but far enough to give him a very comfortable feeling and to allow him to accept all favors from good women with no sense of a troubled conscience.

Even the favor of a good girl's love and the bestowal of her hand and heart he takes without a qualm.

Possibly this is because he has been educated from time immemorial to think he has a right to do as he pleases, and because he knows women have been educated to accept his misdeeds as trivial faults, and to forgive them before he asks for forgiveness. Woman meanwhile does not forget her mistakes. At least her one mistake. A woman excuses herself for every other fault but the one. She ignores her own violent temper, her tendency to talk scandal and injure others by her envious speech, her sins of extravagance and disorder, her lack of loyalty, and her selfishness in the small things which make daily living agreeable or otherwise. All these faults she denies or forgets.

But she never forgets her having erred in overstepping the mark where prudence ends and indiscretion begins.

It's a Feminine Tendency to Dwell on Errors of the Past

Therefore it is difficult to promise any woman real happiness after a misstep because of this feminine tendency to dwell on the errors of the past.

So far as keeping her secret from the man she may marry, she must argue that out according to her own dictates of conscience. She may argue that her past belongs to herself; that she is better than any man in her conduct; that she has not erred in any degree as the man has erred; that she does not ask him for a detailed story of his past and that he has no right to ask her.

But the old laws of the world will confront her possibly some day. A story may come to her ears regarding the past of her husband. She will turn a deaf ear or make light of it. Even if she questions him and he confesses it is true she will soon ignore it. But if the husband hears a similar story regarding her past, and he questions her, he will not make light of it.

Men Are Growing Liberal Toward Women with a Past

All this she must take into consideration before she decides upon her course of action.

There are, every year, more and more men who marry girls with a past and who know it and condone it.

Men are growing more liberal, they are realizing that women are only human like themselves; and they are beginning to understand that one error, caused by misplaced affection and lack of knowledge of the laws of life, and lack of the right instruction from a sensible mother, does not mean that a girl is bad or wicked or unworthy of a man's trust and confidence.

Let this unhappy young woman live so exemplary a life that some such man may choose her for a wife in days to come.

ROSES REDIVIVUS

By MINNA IRVING

THE garden where the roses bloomed
A few short months ago,
Is gemmed with little pools of ice,
And drifted deep with snow.
The thorny bushes, gorgeous then
With queenly blossoms bright,
Are stiffly folded root and branch
In shrouds of frozen white.

But all along the windy west,
Behind the dusky pines,
With pink and crimson radiance
The Winter sunset shines.
The hue of every rose of June
The glowing sky discloses,
For lo! within its glory lies
The heaven of the roses.
